This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S LICENSE TO RICHARD HOGHTON

TO VISIT HIS BROTHER THOMAS HOGHTON, AN EXILE FOR HIS "BLESSED CONSCIENCE"

EDITED BY JOSEPH GILLOW

THOUGH the following document has never been printed in its entirety, I treated the subject at considerable length in The Haydock Papers, published in 1888, and therefore it would be improper to trench upon space primarily devoted to original matter by repeating what is already in print. I may remark, however, that I was led into error by the eminent seventeenth-century Lancashire antiquary, Dr. Richard Kuerden, in stating that the hero of "The Blessed Conscience" transferred the residence of his family from the foot to the top of the hill at Hoghton. Since my account was written Hoghton Tower—abandoned by the Hoghtons as their residence from about 1707—has been admirably restored by the late baronet and his brother, the present Sir James de Hoghton, and upon a recent visit to Hoghton Sir James informed me that during the restoration it was made abundantly evident that the so-called erection of the castle by Thomas Hoghton between the years 1563 and 1565 should have been described as extensive additions and alterations to a very much earlier structure. A closer inspection than I had ever before made satisfied me that such was the case. I may add that the ancient bell from the suppressed chantry of Ashton-under-Lyne has awakened from its long slumber, and summons the inmates of the castle to their daily routine, though unfortunately it has had to be partially recast; and Thomas Hoghton's portrait—through an unfortunate fire—is now the only ancient family picture that adorns the walls of Hoghton Tower.

One word more with respect to the pathetic ballad, "The Blessed Conscience," which was wont to raise the most sensitive feelings in the hearts of Lancashire sympathisers. Thomas Hoghton died at Liége in 1580. In the following year Blessed Edmund Campion was martyred, and straightway Henry Walpole sought relief for his emotion by pouring out his grief in verse—"An Epitaphe of the lyfe and deathe of the most famouse clerke and vertuose priest, Edmñd Campian," which was secretly printed, together with other poetical effusions on the same subject, by Stephen Vallenger, and distributed broadcast. Walpole was one of that famous coterie of minor poets which even included within its ever-changing circlets personal friends of the greatest of English bards—William Shakespeare. Amongst these may be mentioned Richard Verstegan, Robert Southwell, poet and martyr, Stephen Vallenger, poet, printer, and exile, Anthony Greneway, Francis Tregian, the exile, Thomas Shelton, Richard Barnfield, Ralph Radclyffe, and "silver-mouthed" Anderton alias "John Brereley, Priest." From these and such like came the Lacrymae Catholicae—the outpourings of sorely afflicted souls—which gave relief to the pent-up feelings of our bitterly persecuted ancestors. Hoghton was a personal friend of Richard Verstegan, and probably assisted that indefatigable worker in the cause of the Old Faith by partially defraying the expense of his private printing press. Verstegan's "Odes" are justly celebrated, though the whereabouts of three copies of the volume only are known—one of which is in the writer's possession—but poems of his are to be found in many works. It was he who edited the work and wrote the verses in the martyred Earl of Arundel's translation of "An Epistle in the Person of Christ to the Faithfull Soule" by the learned Lanspergius. And I have little doubt in my own mind that Verstegan was the author of "The Blessed Conscience." The close connection of this touching lament with the following royal license will appear upon perusal of the copy inserted in full in The Hopkins Papers.

Fayr Englande! nowe ten tymes adieu,
And frendes that theryn dwel;
Fayrwel, my broder Richarde trewe,
Whom I dyd love soe wel.
Fayrwel, fayrwel! gode people all,
And learne experience;
Love not too much ye golden ball,
But kepe your conscyence!

Elizabeth R.

T. WINDEBANK.

SEAL.

The endorsement of the document is partially obliterated; it reads—"License for Richard Houghton . . . . . Antwerp for . . . . . ."

The Queen's signature is at the head of the document, and at foot is that of the clerk of the signet, Thomas Windebank, who occasionally acted as Clerk of the Privy Council. He was knighted by James I. in 1603. By his wife, Frances, daughter of Sir Edw. Dymoke, of Scrivelsby, co. Lincoln, he left an only son, Francis, and three daughters, of whom Mildred married Robert Reade, of Linkenholt, Hants., and was mother of Robert and Thomas Reade, who both became Catholics. Of the latter, known as the Royalist, a notice appears in my Bibliographical Dictionary of the English Catholics. Robert was for a time secretary to his uncle, Sir Francis Windebank. During the Civil Wars he fled to the Continent, and in 1647 visited Rome. In 1656 he was living in Paris, and translated and published "The Spirituall Combat," dedicated to the Abbot Walter Montague, and to which the Rev. Wm. Clifford added a preface. Sir Thomas Windebank's son, Sir Francis, was also clerk to the signet, and eventually became Secretary of State. He always displayed strong Catholic tendencies, which brought him into odium, and finally caused his political ruin. In December, 1640, he fled to Calais with his nephew and secretary, Robert Reade, settled in Paris, and died there in 1646, having shortly before been received into the Church.

No. II.

TOWER BILLS

THE Tower Bills are a series of accounts sent in by the Lieutenant of the Tower for such prisoners as he maintained at the expense of the Crown. They do not form an absolutely complete list of the prisoners, for Elizabeth made men of wealth pay for themselves. No reference will be found to Philip, Earl of Arundel, who was in the Tower from 1585–1595, nor to a man like George Gifford, who left his name on two places in the Beauchamp Tower, with the date, August, 1585, but he was a pensioner of the Court, and it would seem an agent provocateur. In Bill No. 39, the charges of Thomas Abington are sent in for a year and a half. The reason probably was that, as all his estates had been seized, payment could no longer be made from them.

Again, there are some cases of what looks like bad book-keeping or dishonesty. Thus Alexander Bryant was sent to the Tower to be tortured on the 3rd of May, 1581 (J. R. Dasent, Acts of Privy Council, xiii, 37), but payment for his keep is demanded for the whole term beginning on Lady Day. Smaller faults are also observable here and there.

In spite of these defects, the Tower Bills present us with invaluable information regarding the most conspicuous victims of religious persecution, not obtainable elsewhere. The series commences at the time when Elizabeth's government was still trusting to a policy of slowly starving Catholicism to death.

The prisoners in the early lists are chiefly sympathisers with Mary Stuart. The only English sufferer for religion seems to be Henry Alway, who will easily be identified with the Alwey mentioned at page 60 of our first volume, and with him the venerable Confessor, Richard Creagh, Archbishop of Armagh. At Christmas, 1577, we find Thomas Sherwood, who is found with a cross opposite his name on the 9th of February, 1577–8, though his martyrdom is generally dated on the 7th. It is not till the end of 1580 that new priests from the seminaries, Johnson, Cottam, Kirby, &c., are sent in here to be tortured, for the Tower was the only prison in which this abuse of royal power was regularly practised.

In 1581 we find a greatly increased number of prisoners, including John Hart, whose Diarium Turris (first printed anonymously at the end of the Roman edition of Sander, De Schismate, 1585, and frequently since then) gives the most valuable account we possess of the sufferings endured by the prisoners. The Diary is sometimes, by error, attributed to Edward Rishton, who brought out the first edition of Sander; in which edition, however, this Diary is not found. But, as appears from these bills, Hart was the only possible writer, whose term of imprisonment coincides with the Diary, while Rishton seems never to have been in the Tower at all.

Hart's constancy failed for a time under the terrors of his prison, but he eventually recovered courage, and persevered in the good confession. Nichols, who figures close beside him, fell away altogether. The loss of the bills for the second half-year of 1581 prevents us getting any notice of Father Campion, but the bills for 1582 show, by the curt note "mort." or "ex." against this or that name, what the date was at which those martyrs suffered.

In the bill for Michaelmas, 1583, will be noticed the name of William Carter. This was the printer executed on a preposterous charge of exciting Catholics to assassinate Elizabeth, because he had printed a book which praised Judith. Then will be noticed the gradually increasing number of sufferers for other sham plots, the Ardens, Somervilles, &c. They show how Walsingham was gradually persuading Elizabeth and public opinion that her life was in danger. On the 10th of July, 1584, the Prince of Orange was assassinated in Holland, and the excitement caused by it enabled Walsingham's party to pass the bloody code, known as that of the 27th year of Elizabeth, according to which every Catholic priest was considered a traitor by the mere fact of his coming into England.

This explains the word "dismissed," which is found in the bills for Christmas, 1584. Priests would not be liable to this Act unless they "came into" England after its passing—so a number of them were exiled on the 21st of January, 1584-5, becoming liable to death ipso facto if they returned.

After this the number of priests in the Tower was greatly diminished. The elaborate fraud of pretending that they were political offenders of the first class (as the Tower prisoners were supposed to be) was no longer necessary. They shared the lot of the felons in Newgate, and their names (when recorded) are to be found in the "Prison Lists," printed in a previous volume of the Catholic Record Society's Publications.

The next great event illustrated by our bills is the Babington plot. The bill for Michaelmas, 1586, gives useful evidence of the dates at which the conspirators were confined, and when they were led forth to suffer.

After this the lists are made up of 'suspects' of all sorts, of priests, such as Father Creighton, S.J., and of the future martyrs: Roger Ashton, Richard Leigh, and Robert Tankard. We find also the names of Irish leaders, of some real traitors (coining was regarded as treason in those days), and of some pretenders to that honour, as Pooley, Stafford, and Moody, who are known to us as agents provocateurs of Walsingham in various sham plots contrived to ruin Queen Mary.

After the Armada period the Tower Bills become rarer, but become once more a regular series during the Titus Oates period. These I propose to publish in a future contribution.

The papers themselves are somewhat difficult to edit, because of their constant repetitions, with little or no variation, of the tariff according to which the expenses were calculated. This is given in full in every entry, with one or two exceptions, mentioned in the early bills. I have endeavoured to preserve the memory of this by occasional repetitions, and by the constant use of signs to show that omissions were being made, which were to be supplied according to the full formula previously quoted.

The bills are now preserved at the Record Office, "Exchequer of Receipt, Miscellanea, Bundle 342." Mixed up with them occur an almost equal number of bills for the salary of the Lieutenant, and payments of wardens, the gentleman porters, the yeomen waiters, &c. My best thanks are due to Father P. Ryan, S.J., for transcribing these difficult records.

No. III.

THE LIFE AND MARTYRDOME OF MR. MAXFIELD, PRIEST, 1616

THE venerable Thomas Maxfield suffered at Tyburn on the first of July, 1616. His fortitude made a great impression, and letters giving an account of his death were at once sent by his friends in England to the Seminary at Douay, which, in fact, he had but lately left. At Douay these accounts were recast as "relations," those intended for the foreign public being written in Latin. An early and very brief form of such a relation will be found in the Miscellany of the Abbotsford Club (vol. i, p. 97), printed from the Balfour MSS. in the Advocates' Library, Edinburgh.

There is also a very brief MS. relation among the Westminster Archives (vol. xv, fo. 275), which is perhaps earlier still. It is dated August 11, 1616, being thus endorsed; "Relatio Præsidis Collegii Duaceni Anglorum de Martyrio R^di^ Dni., D. Thomæ Maxfieldi. Eiusdem Collegii Alumni, passi Julii xi.—R. Aug. xi, 1616."

As more news came in, a more ample history was put together, and on the 15th of September, 1616, the censor's approbation was obtained for printing it. The title of the second edition shows that it was based on a letter sent from England by a priest, who had been a Douay student in past years. Tradition has ascribed to Dr. Kellison, then President of the College, the credit of having given the story its final form and its Latin dress, though his name does not appear on the title page, and the authorship seems to have remained unknown to the translator of the version now printed. The book itself was published before the end of the same year by the widow of Lawrence Kellam, under the title:—

Vita et Martyrium D. Thomæ Max-Fildæi, Collegii Anglorum Duaceni Sacerdotis, Londini ob Sacerdotium capitis damnati, 11 Julii, 1616. Ex litteris Anglice datis aucta, et Latine reddita. Duaci, 1616, 18mo.

It was reprinted in the following year, with accounts of three other Douay martyrs, who suffered in the same year as Maxfield.

Exemplar Literarum a quodam sacerdote Collegii Anglorum Duaceni quondam alumno ex Anglia ad idem Collegium transmissarum. De Martyriis quatuor eiusdem Collegii Alumnorum ob Sacerdotium hoc anno 1616, in Anglia morti damnatorum.

Pretiosa in conspectu Domini mors Sanctorum eius. Psal. 115.

Duaci, typis Petri Aurol, sub Pelicano aureo, Anno M.DC.XVII.

Small 8vo, pp. 56, with the censor's approbation, dated Douay, 15 Sept., 1616.

Except in their opening and closing paragraphs, there seems to be little difference between the two editions. Both are works of great rarity. There is a copy of the latter in the British Museum, but not of the former, and I am indebted to Mr. Joseph Gillow, the fortunate possessor of one, for information concerning it, as well as for the identification of the translator's name and the genealogical and bibliographical notes which follow.

The quaint English translation, now printed for the first time, was made, as we shall see, some years after the martyrdom, at the request of the Rev. Mother Frances Stanford, Prioress of the English Augustinian convent at Bruges, who claimed a family connection with the martyr, inasmuch as the wife of his brother, Peter Macclesfield (or Maxfield), was a sister of the grandmother of the prioress. Peter Macclesfield, the eldest son and heir of the martyr's father, William Macclesfield, Esq., of Maer Hall and Chesterton Hall, co. Stafford, married Joan, daughter of Thomas Levison, of Wolverhampton, Esq., and sister of Sir Walter Levison, Knt. Mrs. Macclesfield's sister, Anne, was the wife of Sir Robert Stanford, of Perry Hall, in the same county, Knt., and his son Edward, of the same place, was the father of the prioress. This good religious was born in 1596, and in 1619 was professed at the English Augustinian convent of St. Monica's, Louvain, which had been founded in 1609. In twenty years the number of postulants had become so great that it was determined to begin a filiation at Bruges, and thither nine of the religious proceeded on September 14, 1629, under the direction of Mother Frances Stanford. It is clear, therefore, that the translation was presented to the prioress sometime between 1629, when she went to Bruges, and 1635, the date of her death.

The translator, who signs himself "I. B.," is evidently to be identified with the Rev. John Bolt, chaplain and organist at St. Monica's, Louvain, at the time of the martyrdom and for many years later. It was no doubt during her residence at Louvain that he was induced by Mother Frances to undertake the translation, which occupied him, as he owns in the dedication, for so many years.

Even this delay is worthy of passing notice. Bolt, indeed, speaks of "the unwoonted hardnesse of the Latin style" having daunted his courage and quite dejected him. This must be taken with the proverbial grain of salt. Dr. Kellison's Latin is not particularly crabbed, as a perusal of the text will show. Bolt's difficulty was subjective. He had come to his studies for the Church as a middle-aged man, and writing was not his strong point. His genius was for music, and his career as a musician needs some notice in this introduction to his only known literary production.

John Bolt was born about 1563, of a family of some account in Exeter, as he is said to have had a brother a knight. His natural genius for music obtained him such reputation that he was summoned to Court, where he spent two or three years, his talents being highly esteemed by Queen Elizabeth—no mean judge in such matters. When he left the Court in order to become a Catholic, the Queen was so much displeased that, soundly rating her Master of Music, she threatened to throw "her pantoufle at his head for looking no better unto him." It is recorded that her Majesty even went the length of offering to overlook his conversion, and allow him to remain a Catholic, if he would return to Court. But Bolt preferred to live by teaching music in Catholic families, where he could practise his religion. In this way he resided with Sir John Petre at Thorndon in Essex, with Richard Verney at Compton in Warwickshire, and with others, finally being domiciled with the Wisemans of Braddocks in Essex at the time of his arrest with William Wiseman in Golden Lane, London, in March, 1593-4. He was thrown into prison, and the infamous Topcliffe intended to torture him, but through the intercession of Lady Penelope Rich, who had known him at Court, he was released, and enabled to withdraw to the Continent. After settling for some years at St. Omers College, where he doubtless taught music and acted as organist, he removed to the English Benedictine Convent at Brussels, "to help their music, which hath been so famous." After three years, these good nuns persuaded him to join the English Benedictines at St. Gregory's Monastery at Douay, where he assumed the alias of Johnson (probably derived from his father's Christian name), and was there received as a novice. Finding, however, that the Benedictine rule did not suit him, he removed to Douay College, and was ordained priest in 1605. For some years he resided in the diocese of Cambray, but in 1613, whilst on a visit to Louvain to attend the profession of Sister Magdalen Throckmorton at St. Monica's, he was induced by the Prioress Wiseman to remain and accept the position of chaplain and organist to the convent. And there the venerable man passed the remainder of his life in peace, dying on August 3, 1640, at the advanced age of 77.

The manuscript itself is of great interest. In his introductory letter Bolt says, "I thought it best to be written with myne owne hand." This he has done. The initials "I. B.," signed to the introduction, have a special character about them, which of itself suggests an autograph, and the 27 pages (6 in. by 4½ in.) are all in the same neat artistic hand. The four margins of each page are ruled, those of the title, of its reverse, and of the first page, have also pen-and-ink ornaments on the borders. The original binding was in marbled paper, the sides of which have been renewed. Over the title is written, "To our closter of Nazaret"—perhaps in Mother Stanford's hand. At the back of the title is a print of the martyr, perhaps unique, which is here reproduced, so that no further description of it is necessary, except to say that it bears the artist's signature, "P. Petret, fe. 1621." Holding this to the light, one reads at the back, "To Mr. Barber."

When the cause of Beatification of the martyr was begun, the MS. was presented, in June, 1882, by the Reverend Mother of the Augustinians at Bruges to the late Father John Morris, S.J., and is now preserved in the Postulator's library at Farm Street. The MS. is not paged, but I have inserted into the text the pagination of the Latin edition of 1617.

TO THE
REVERENT & RELIGIOUS
MOTHER FRANCIS STANFORD
PRIORESSE OF THE ENGLISH
IN BRUGIS

Reuerent Mother. This work as it is translated for your sake so doth it offer itselfe to your Reverence's hand, without bearing any other ornament on the frontispice, but the life and death of a priest, any other recommendation then the worth of the subject, any other thing that might better befitt me to present yr Reuerence with, or that might best consorte with your condition, then the life & martyrdome of the same Priest & Martyr & your holy Cosen. Long indeed hath it been in acting, and therefore you might perhapps have sometyme despaired for euer hauing it presented to your view, seeing you so often desired it of me, & I promising but as yett not seen to performe it; but not at all to performe it I could not find in my hart, especialy considering the desier I saw you had to me thereof, & also my owne desier, longing to fulfill for your deare sake whatsoeuer was possible for my willing mind to procure & effect; & although I thought it a thing most worthy my labour to bestowe sometyme in translating it, & to present your Reuerence with the first fruites thereof, yet taking it in hand both first and second tyme, the vnwoonted hardnesse of the Latin style daunted my courage, and had quite deiected me had not the remembrance againe of your last wordes not long agoe vnto me concerning it, stirrd me vp to take hart to goe thourough with it though neuer so painefull. Wherefore at last by God's assistance I haue made an end, & euen now I present you with it in that manner & greatnesse as my hart doth wish, for if my loue could so effect it, it should yet be better & greater: accept thereof therefore, Dear Mother, not as it seemeth, but as I could wish.

Many were the causes that dared me not to deliuer it into the presse, whereof on, & that the smalest was, least that the presse would haue so greedely demaunded for the printing as that I should haue had nothing left to pay for the binding; & therefore considering otherwise I thought it best for to be written with myne owne hand, that so your Reuerence might remember it, & in remembring it, might be mindfull to pray for the wrighter, as he will not cease to pray for you. Your's in what he is able.

"Princes haue persecuted me without cause, but I haue been afrayd of thy words."

"They haue indeed threatning words, as, I banish, kill, racke, burne, I cast to the teeth of deuouring beasts and boucher the members. But thy words haue rather terrified me. 'Feare not them who kill 'the body but cannot kill the soul; but feare him who can cast both 'body & soul into hel.' At these words my hart trembled, & I haue contemned a man my persecutor, & haue ouercome the Diuel my deceiuer." St Aug: Com: 33 upon the 118 psalm.

The life & Martyrdom of Mr Max-filde Priest

Reuerend, who here professe the Catholike faith, are brought into great straights of all things, they are calumniated, spoyled of their goods, manickled with fetters, thrust into prison, & as it were guiltie of wicked crimes are vexed with most greeueous iniuries & calumniat ignominies, as heretofore by the letters of others yee haue vnderstood.

That which I now thought good is to declare vnto you more exactly the famous Martyrdome of on of your foster children & Priest, as of late yee haue heard something thereof reported by many relatings.

(p. 6) This man was caled Thomas Maxfilde, heretofore amongst you named only Filde, borne of a noble & auncient race in the County of Stafford. His Father was Catholike, a man of worthy pietie, constancie & grauitie, & who under the raigne of two princes was much renowned for his patient sufferance of a long imprisonmēt, confiscation of all his goods, & lastly the sentence of death for the profession of his faith.

This Thomas was nurst & brought into the world, both parents being in prison, that the prison, being of his parents faith a witnesse, should give to him their Sonn both breath & life for to lay downe his soul for the same faith hereafter, & that he likewise being borne to the conflicts of the faith should euen from his infancy be instructed in the same combats through the deformitie & incommoditie of a prison, neither indeed did he sooner taste the milk of his Nurce (p. 7) when as by suffering the labours of Martyrs he himself wore the badge of a Martyr.

That pietie, that zeal of faith & those precepts of a vertuous life he learnt at home, which afterwards throughout the whole course of his life flourished in him to the proffit of others. Being instructed somewhat in the Rudiments of a scholler, (because with vs here now none can frequent the studies of higher Arts except he make ship-wracke of his faith & drink the furious poyson of heresie,) he betooke himselfe to Douay in Belgio [16 March, 1603] a most flourishing Academy of all good Arts and vertue. There in your English Colledge, a famous fountaine & Seminary of many Martyrs in Christ, he liued & heard his course of philosophie & almost two yeares of school diuinitie, but at the length being vexed with a greeuous and long sicknesse he was forced to intermitt his studies & retourne into England for to recouer his health [17 May, 1610].

This wee have beheld sometymes and have greeued thereat, to witt, how young youthes of an excellent witt, whilst they confirme their forces & strength of body with new temptations either to loose quite their souls health, or at least to haue greatly put it in hazard, for that they suffer themselues to be enticed & ensnared with idlenesse, remissnesse & voluptuousnesse in banquetings & the flattering reconcilers and fauourits of vices. But this young man was of that courage & hardinesse of mind, & of that continence & vertuous disposition, that neither the faire alurements by nature inbread in vs, nor the lubricke wayes of vnconstant youth, (p. 8) nor the varietie of delights could lull asleep his vertue & strength, or persuaide him the least to runne astray or reuoake him from his purpose of good life & vertuous course. As soone therefore as he recouered he determined to retourne to his studies in learning & vertue againe, where comming againe vnto you and receaued into your company, he absolued & made an end of the rest of his course in diuinitie & then at length hauing receaued holy orders, he was designed, after the manner of the Colledge, to retourne into this vineyard of ours [17. Iul. 1615].

As soone as he arrived at London he went vnto that prison which is caled the Gate-house for to visit a Priest a most intimate friend of his who then was there a prisoner, in which place he celebrated his first Masse in England. Herein surely the diuine Prouidence was shewen least that at any other place he should vndertake his Apostolical function, then where for the discharge of the same effected he was to be shutt up himselfe not long after in a continual custodie, but thence to be lead forth againe vnto a sure end of his life & vnto a most glorious crowne. Scarce had he laboured in our Lord's vineyard three mounths when as vpon the feast of All Saints, hauing said Masse, he was by the Sergeants of the heretike Bishops taken praying & giving thanks to God before the Alter, who drawing him with great force presented him before their Maisters.

They then questioned him concerning his priest-hood whence he had it? & why being a Priest he came into the land against the lawes of the realme, also they demaunded of him concerning the oath of pretended fidelitie. But he boldly (p. 9) & freely confessed that he had receaved holy orders according to the Catholike rite & autoritie derived from the highest Bishop the Pope, & was likewise by his power confirmed whereby to stirr vp Catholikes to vertue & reduce those that were estraunged from the faith & from the Church vnto the vnion & communion of the same. Moreover he said that there were no lawes of princes which could abrogate or forbidd the lawefull mission of Priests which the supreame lawgiver Christ our Lord had established & confirmed, & as for the oath he quite refused it and did detest it for that it contained many things contrary to faith & that none could sweare it without daunger of his eternal saluation, neuerthelesse he said he was readie to exhibite all obedience to the king in all ciuill matters that are due vnto him, or in all things belonging to right of princes. But all this was not according to their desier who preferre the Scepters of kings before the keys of the Church; & whatsoeuer either right or wrong that they once shall determine to be against his Maiestie, they as it were with deceitfull paintings doe colour with their counterfeit faith & false obedience of their princes, that thus at least their deeds might seeme lawfull. They therefore cast the Priest of Christ in prison at Westminster commonly caled the Gate-house, in which place he excelled those that were his fellow captiues for the faith, in his constancie in prayer to God, in his studie of conseruing peace with all, & in his often exercise of vertue & dailie labour for the gainening of soules to Christ, whence that plainely did shew itselfe vnto our eyes the which wee (p. 10) once redd in thecclesiasticall Annales, how that God is woont to chaunge prisons & stewes into temples & religious cloisters for his seruants, & that their feet may be in the stocks & fettered with chaines, & yet their mindes remaine fixed above tasting the heauenly sweetnesse.

Neither content with the paines that others afflicted him with for the sweet name of Jesus, he added of his owne mortifications of his bodie compassing it with a sharpe-pointed Iron chaine for a girdle, to the end he might according to the Apostle's counsel [1. Cor. 9] castigate his body & bring it vnto seruitude, thereby in what he was able to extinguish quite the wantonnesse & concupiscence of the flesh, for if thou neglectest to punish it, it will rise against the spirit, & vnless thou bring it into subiection, it will shake of both yoake & bridle of reason, & fiercely lusting beyond all bonds of the diuine law, it will cast thy soul downe headlong for euer.

His dedicated hart to Christ did burne with zeal for such soules as perished, & inwardly was much greeved to see men redeemed with the precious blood of God to runne headlong into eternal punishment. And although he reaped some fruites of such his laboures being in prison, yett that was all to little in regard of the greater proffite for which in desier he burned, wherefore after eight mounthes imprisonment or thereabout, he constituted with himselfe this, which was, how he might try to gett out of prison by some occasion whereby traveling here & there he might freely exercise his priestly functions to the greater gaine of soules, so to satisfie his longing thirst he had of their conuersion to God. (p. 11) And this was the onely cause that moued him to attempt this his flight, as testified a reuerent Priest of the Societie of Jesus who was his Confessarius there. He first recommendeth the matter by many prayers vnto God togither with certaine dayes of fast, almesgiving & offering of the holy sacrifice of the Masse for that intention, praying earnestly that God would guide & direct this present businesse as also the whole course of his life for his diuine honour & glorie, & that he would graunt that event which might be best for the fulfilling of his diuine will.

These his godly desiers & holy purpose were receaued of the night designed for his flight [14 June, stil. vet., 1616], & now it was come, therefore a barr of the windowe being broken he attempted to escape, but alas, whilst he was descending from the vpper part of the house by a rope and had scarce touched the ground with his feet, then a fellow caught him fast about the middle & cryed to the neighbours for help. The watch being raised through his cry came hastily & in a chafeing & fretting humour they snatch the Priest & thrust him vnder a table where he might not stand vpright, then putt about his necke an iron coller of twelve pound waight, to this hanging a chaine of a hundred pound waight, they compassed his body round therewith, & lastly shut him within the dungeon of the prison, where they sett his feet after that manner in the stocks that he could neither stand vp nor lye downe, nor so much as turne himselfe, but hanging as it were between (p. 12) heaven & earth he might sitt double with great trouble & paine. There did they leave him from the dawning of Friday vntil Munday to be vexed & tormented in that manner for more than 70 houers, permitting neither hatt, cloake, blancket or strawe, no, not so much as to exonerate his body. They that were in prison for other wicked crimes, though of another Religion, being moued to compassion went & opened the trap-doare of the dungeon & let downe a couerleed & taught him how he might ease himselfe & pull forth his feet out of the stocks. The Priest likewise of whom wee mentioned before, came to the hole but not without great daunger, both to condole his calamitie & also to congratulate with him, & in what he was able to yeeld him some comforte, but comming he found him very cheareful of heauenly ioy & sweetnesse with great hope & confidence in Almightie God. Notwithstanding amongst others of his dolours & that which molested him most of all were the wormes & creeping beastes which that filthie place had engendred. The keepers of the prison comming afterwards & finding him thus mercyfully vsed, they furiously tooke on against this humaine courtoisie exhibited towards him & were very angrie, snatcht away the coverleed, let downe & pinned in the stocks so fast that they could not be opened of him any more. Notwithstanding they could not so effect (God so prouiding) as to deprive this his seruant from all ease & corporall solace.

(p. 13) In the meane time the cheife prefect of the prison had a commaund from the counsell to bring him to New-gate, a most certaine sygne of his conueyeng death. On Munday therefore about evening, they drew the Priest out of the dungeon [17 Jun., stil. vet.], but so deformed by reason of hunger, watching & filthinesse of the place, that yee could scarse know him. His feet were so benummed that for a great space he could neither stand nor walke. At length having receaued the vse of his feet, they pluck him along with his hands bound through the streets without either cloake or hatt into the other prison which was a good long mile from this he was in. The fellow who intercepted the Martyr in his flight behoulding what miseries he endured, wept & greeved that he had hindered him, & therefore gave him his cloake to the end he might more decently goe throûgh the streetes; another Priest that was in the prison gave him his hatt.

When he was brought to New-gate they loaded him afresh with chaines, neither would they permitt him to be amongst the Catholikes, nor yet amongst the better sort of protestants, but thrust him within the filtheist place of the prison amongst the rogs & theeues, who were very many in number & kept in great miserie; being put there & sleeping on the bords, for all this he was not vnmindfull of his vocation, but reduced two condemned persons vnto the Catholike faith, which when the keepers vnderstood, least he should doe the like againe, they removed him & permitted (p. 14) him to be amongst the other Catholikes & Priests that were there in the prison.

It was then nine a clock at night, at which tyme it was not lawfull for any bed to be brought into the prison for him. Notwithstanding on of his fellow-prisoners a Catholike gave his bed vnto him to rest his wearie body after so many dayes travil he endured. The same night it pleased Almightie God to show vnto him that had lent his bed what a great personage he was vnto whom he had exhibited that charitable deed, for he saw in his sleep a sonn enclosed within that narrow place which he could neither compasse for the greatnesse, nor yet behould for the brightnesse, in so much that he was faine to cover his face with a vaile.

The dayes of sessions were at hand to which upon Wedensday being the 26 of June* the seruant of Christ was caled where being questioned againe like as before by the false Bishops concerning his priesthood & the oath of pretended fidelitie, he againe confessed that he was a Priest and consecrated according to the Catholike rite, also that by a legitimate vocation & autoritie he was designed from the Apostolical Sea vnto this vineyard of England; the oath he vtterly denyed, not for that he refused to obey civill fidelitie to the king, but for that he preferred his faith towards God & the Catholique religion before the precepts & statuts of men.

There stood as the manner is, twelve sworne men of the Jwry, (p. 15) who were asked of the Judge what their opinion is concerning this man, who going aside & discoursing amongst themselues about the matter, at their retourne pronounced him guiltie of high treason, wherevpon he was straitwayes lead back to the prison, loaded with fetters & so strictly kept that it was lawfull for none to speake with him. Notwithstanding he procured thanksgiving for this benefit receaved, & Te Deum to be sung by his fellow captiues. The next day he is brought againe before the Judges who vpon their faith offer him his life if so be he will take the oath afore mentioned, neuerthelesse he constantly denyeth it as before he often did, & withall yeeldeth the reasons which declare it to be vnlawful for any Christian to take it vnlesse he will preiudice his faith & saluation of his soule, & then turning himselfe to the people that were about him, caleth them all to witnesse how free he was from treason for which they had condemned him, & how they had accused & iudged him for no other cause but for that he being a Priest, consecrated after the Catholike rite, was entered the land against the lawes of the kingdome, & that this crime (if so they will have it to be a crime), they would forgive him gratis if so he would prooue periurious to God and the Romaine Catholik faith. He would haue added many things more whereby to cleare his innocency, but the Judges would not permitt him to speake further, but rather gave sentence against him, wch was that he should dye as a traytor.

He is therefore sent againe to the prison, (p. 16) the Sergeants drawing, pressing & pushing him forwards through the streetes as he goeth, & at length haueing put chaines vpon him they thrust him into a corner of the prison and strictly forbid any leave to come to speake with him, & in this manner was he kept vntil Munday. Neither yet would they permitt him to be at quiet, for all he was shut vp with so many bar-doars, for they sent vnderhand such as should search his chamber if they could find any letters whereby to attach him of some crime, & to look whither they could find any thing belonging to the Catholike faith. The Shyreus also brought in a Minister to trouble him with contention & wrangling for such seeke not to know the truth who come to Priests onely when they are to dye, & fly & abhorre to approach vnto those that are detained in prisons though prouoaked & challenged thereto. There were Catholikes who gave money to come to the Priest, but it was wounderfull vnto them to see him thus chaunged as they found him, for his eyes, face and countenance was very pleasant & chearfull; constant in his hope & confidence towards God, & his discourse did breath forth an incredible (p. 17) feruour of the loue of God and his neighbour; moreover all his speeches were so seasoned with diuine sweetnesse that now you might perceaue him to haue alreadie in his hart those ioyes which afterwards did expect him, for God is woont to visit such as are in tribulation for his name, yea rather to converse togither with them in their chaines & torments, also to proue the waight of the temptations & to taste the chalice of their passion, & according to the greatnesse & multitude of their torments to infuse within their harts as much of his heauenly grace and sweetnesse as will wipe forth and blott out all feeling of greife and earthly tribulation. Whence may they iustly sing with the psalmist (psal. 93) Secundum multitudinem dolorum meorum in corde meo, consolationes tuæ lætificaverunt animam meam. "According to the multitude of my sorrowes in my hart, thy consolations have made my soul ioyfull."

Amonst those that made entrance into the martyr there was a certaine gentlewoeman who was renowned not so much for the greatnesse of her gentrie as for her sanctitie of life. She hauing put on a poore habite, assumed for a companion another woeman conscius of her fact, & so entered the prison as if she had had some husband or father there to bring him some meate. When she was within what by humble entreatie & faire speeches vnto the keepers with liberal bestowing of money vpon them & promising more hereafter, she procured so farr as that she wrested a licence to speake to the Martyr. This woeman declared vnto us afterward how after many most sweet discourses of heauenly matters she had togither with him talked concerning such necessaries as he wanted, the which she entreated him to demaund of her if he stood in need of any thing, either for his food and apparel, or for (p. 18) the discharge of his being at cost for any thing to the prison, or if he would haue any help from his freinds, or whatsoever els he thought necessarie, that he would speak vnto her for it, the which she would most willingly procure if it lay in her power, if not, she would effect it through the help of others; but the Martyr, (as she tould vs,) rendred her great thanks & saied that as yet he had not asked any other thing then the daylie prayers of Catholikes that God would strengthen him with his grace, to the end he might be able to suffer the labour & undergoe the daunger of the combat which now he was to vndertake. Then she saied she somewhat feared least feare of death had layed hould on him, & therefore inculcated such motiues as she remembered of contemning death; first that the whole life of man was composed and ordained to eternitie & [lasted] but a moment; secondly that the most cruelest death is but one instant of that same moment on which eternity did depend immediatly; thirdly that those torments which merit celestial ioyes ought rather to be iudged pleasures & solaces then paines and torments; fourthly that they who lay vpon a soft feather-bed, sick of the stone or pained with the ach of their sides or ioynts, would feel greater paines then they who were wrested on the rack or hung vpon the gibbet for Christ his sake, for God doth mingle with the torments such comforts as doe take away the feeling of paine. Moreover she willed him to thinck on the victories of the Martyrs, & imitate the constant faith of them whose tryumphs & rewards he coueted; lastly she said that death was not to be feared vnto which an immortalitie did succeed, for by the shortnesse of a holy death, a blessed life should be had in possession, & that which in vs here is a light & momentary tribulation, the same doth worke in heauen an eternal (p. 19) waight of glorie. These she saied, & afterwards he made answere thus (as she declared vnto vs), There is cause indeed, renowned Mistresse, why I ought to yeeld great thanks vnto Almightie God for that through his grace I feare not either paines torments, or infamie of a traytor, or yet the very paine of death itselfe, nor ever will I feare in so good a cause. Of late that troubled me, least standing before the tribunal of the Judges something might have slipped from me, being questioned of so many, which the heretickes taking in the worst sense might have found occasion thence to calumniate the Catholikes, but seeing through God Almightie's goodnesse all things happened according to my mind there is now no more cause why I should feare, yet this I remembered that I was man, that is, fraile & weake, & that for me to perseuer firme in faith was altogither from the diuine help and assistance. Wherefore that I may crave the same hereafter, diffiding in myne owne prayers & merits I doe entreate earnestly to be assisted with the prayers of the good, for neither shall I endeauour sufficiently enough in the meriting of that benefit on which eternal saluation doth depend, yet I confesse my selfe most vnworthie thereof.

The brother also of the Martyr came to the prison for to visite him, whom full of teares on his face and breaking of his wordes with sighes, a grave, constant Catholike a lay-man who had been long in prison did rebuke and chide, affirming him to be vnworthie of his Father, vnworthie of this his Brother, & degenerating from the whole familie & race, also vngrateful of this diuine benefit the most noblest that might be bestowed vpon mortal men. (p. 20) Let me not liue, quoth the other, if I take not the greatest contentment and ioy as is possible for me; neverthelesse I am not able to represse these teares which of their owne accord doe flowe for to pay the tribute of nature which naturaly is due to the death of a most deare Brother that so that truth may shew it selfe, which is, that the good can togither with a sensible and terrene greife, enioy a solide & celestial gladnesse of mind, as it is knowne the bad do walke reioycing with all their corporal mirths and worldly contentments, and yett enduer the most bitter vexations and afflictions in their minds.

The rest who had been to see him were for the most part of the better sort of Spaniards that inhabited London, & amongst these was the Embassader's Sonn & Father Didacus de Fuente, on of the familie of St. Dominike, & a man both pious, learned, prudent & charitable, & of life famous for the strict obseruance of the rule of his order; he was Ghostly-father to the Embassader. After these as the leaders of the companie, followed the rest of his excellence's familie & diuerse others who for other causes remained in the citty, who all came through the streets vnto the prison to see him that was a Priest & member of their owne religion & catholike faith & who seemed vnto them to be condemned to death for no other crime then for that he was a catholike Priest. When these had beheld the generous constancie of the designed Martyr and his chearfulnesse amidst so many calamities, they fell downe at his feet & kissed his hands, his chaines & the ground that toucht his sacred footsteps, desiering his benediction & vrgeing him incessantly with (p. 21) many entreaties that whatsoeuer he stood in need of he would enioyne them to procure it. All which things the heretickes & Jaylors behoulding, were stroocken in amaze through this feruerous zeal & faith of theirs: This was on* Sonday in the euening.

Afterwards retourning home, they, as they are of wounderous devotion & constancie towards God & the catholike faith, expose the Blessed Sacrament, institute supplications & keep a vigil throughout the whole night in prayer before the same, earnestly beseeching Almightie God to strengthen with his grace this their fellow partner of the Catholike communion, & make him inuincible against all assaults of the enemy. The Embassador of the King of Spaine likewise went vnto our King, either to beg the Priest's pardon, as it is reported,) or els that it might be differed vntil another tyme & when as he could receaue no other answere saue that he should come againe vpon Tuesday to know his Maiestie's mind, the Priest was in the meane tyme lead forth to be put to death vpon Munday.

The Martyr calling to mind the benefits of God receaued throughout the whole course of his life, that by the memorie of them he might raise vp in himselfe an affection of gratitude & enkindle a more ardent flame of charitie, he bethought him of the piety of his Mother vnto Colledge, who had brought him vp from a child in vertue & learning & had exalted him vnto the dignitie of Priesthood & now had sent him as a mustred souldiar of Christ vnto a warr, as honourable to the Church, glorious to God & necessarie to the good of soules, being furnished with those armes the which vnles he cast them away, he should not doubte but to be a Conqueror & beare away the victorie. He was sorowful he had not wherewith to repay like a grateful child the pietie of so good a Mother. This therefore came into his minde the which he thought would be a pious worke if so be he left her to be recommended vnto the Legate of Spaine & he to his king. Wherefore he procureth a Priest to be sent for, who was in the same prison but kept in another place, vnto whom he committed this his last petition to be written to the Embassador, which was to beseeche & earnestly entreate him by the bonds wherewith he was bound & by the death now at hand for the Catholike faith which expected him, that he would, as much as he could, shew his most fauorable affection & good will towards the Colledge of the English in Douay, declaring how it was the first Seminarie of the English nation which Philip the second of famous memory, embraced with a fatherly affection, assisting it with a royal stipend, and being placed in his Belgio commaunded to be a most strong refuge of religion [now fallen] in England, & that whatsoeuer Seminaries at Rome, or in Spaine were erected afterwards, they all did issue from this their fruitful mother: moreouer that besides innumerable labourers, either now of late deceased, or as yet labouring in this our Lord's vineyard, their hath proceeded out of this house more then one hundered Priests honored with the crowne of martyrdome, whose blood collected through the maintenance of the Catholike king hath been powered out vpon the earth for the glorie of Christ, whose prayers also in heauen to God most gratefull he dare assure doe invocate the diuine protection & aide for the encrease of the glorie, greatnesse & Maiestie of the Spanish Monarchie, (p. 23) also that if any aduerse chaunce did happen to this auncient fortresse against heretikes constituted vnder their eyes & conspect, the enemies of the faith would tryumphe, neither would they doubt but that the like destinies as happened to the mother might light also vpon her issue. Being therefore retourned into his countrey with great honour as he wisheth & prayeth to God therefore, & being heighly rewarded for his Embassage vndertaken & effected in the name of Christ togither of his king, he would be sollicitous in as much as he was able to defend & preserue this colledge, & labour to his power as that what hitherto hath been the minde and bountie of the Catholike king, the same might also hereafter continue vntil the end. The which favour, if he might be permitted to obtaine & receaue, he would repaye it largely with aboundant thankes from heauen. And that if he might be so bould, neither the Maiestie of his puissant Monarch would terrefie him, a poore Priest, himselfe would begg the same. Yea rather because the prison, his chaines, his condemnation & instant death for the faith, the which expects him at the gates, doe commaund him to be so bould, neither his Maiestie terrefie him so much, as his benignitie and clemencie doth intice him; therefore doth he lye prostrate at his royal feet hartily desiering & beseeching him that he would as a Sonn worthie of such a Father conserue and defend this worke which his magnificent Father had begunne. And least his prayers should be refused & despised, he would alledge his Father who but lately is raigning in heauen, as he trusteth, & togither all those troupes of Martyrs which that house hath brought forth, to be intercessours to the Sonn: (p. 24) but God he would place before his eyes as a most liberal rewarder of such a good worke, & which would be most proffitable to the Church.

With shortnes of tyme, as it is woont, there increased to the Martyr pietie of spirit; & now hauing been long vigilant and intentive in prayer, he expected when he should be caled forth to dye.* On Munday therefore, about five of the clocke in the morning he is caled for by the Sergeants & hangmen who without the doares stood guarding both sides of the hurdle which was tyed to the horsetaile, whereon was spread a little strawe. This was opposite to the place where the other Priests & Catholikes were shut vp in, with a double gate in the night, but in the day with a single one that had wooden barrs plated ouer with Iron for them to see through & take in their sustinance, or to speake to the keeper in their wants. But now the keepers were commaunded to shut-to the outward gates, which I suppose was done to the end that neither they that were within might haue that comforte graunted them to see or speak, & bid the Martyr fare-well, or he to them. Notwithstanding he as he was with his hands tyed, casting his eyes towards the dore of his companions where there was a very little windowe that looked into the street, & giving them a salutation & benediction, togither with the signe of the Crosse vpon himselfe, kissed the hurdle, & so layed himselfe vpon it with his face towards the horse's heels, & in this manner was he drawne through the stony streetes vnto Tiburne, a gallowes some two miles & more (p. 25) beyond the prison.

Besides a great multitude of others, there were others that were English gentlemen Catholikes on horse-back, who accompanied the Martyr vnto the place of execution, many also of those Embassaders familie whom Catholike kings & princes haue in England, but aboue all were the Spaniards who mounted vpon goodly horses, rode two by two in a long trayne both before & on ech side of the Martyr. All these did the Sergeants vse most shamefully, to the end they might driue them away, for oft tymes they sharply would beat their horses, & sometymes the riders themselves; who, nevertheless, by reason of their great multitude, gathered togither againe & accompanied the Priest bare-headed, and bowing them downe, prayed for him peace & constancie, but vnto themselves his benediction, the which he often did imparte vnto them; he made vpon them indeed though hardly, a Crosse, the signe of faith, but so much the more holy no doubt, by that it was formed with his hands bound.

Without London there is a place in wch three wayes doe meet, on this there stands a Gallowes having three corners much nobilitated by the blood of Martyrs, though also it is true that many wicked persons for stealth & murder or the like crimes, being condemned at London, doe there end their life. This Gallowes at midnight before, the Catholikes had adorned & beset with garlands, flowers & braunches round about, & had strawed the ground vnderneath with bayes & sweet hearbs (p. 26) which if you had seene, you would have thought some solemn consecration of the place had been there celebrated, or indeed some great tryumphe, & not any punishment to haue been inflicted vpon a most innocent man. All the Catholikes here did reioyce & scarse could contayne themselves for ioy; the people of other kingdomes did wounder at the constancie & alacritie of the Catholikes of England that being worne with so many persecutions, should yet be so generous in mind as to triumphe in the death of those who were most deare vnto them. The executioners & Sergeants & publike ministers of Justice were abashed and dismaied, & fretted thereat, yea threatned those gentlemen that commended the fact; sometymes they cryed out, What monster is this? Will the papists worship this Gallowes which wee have made as they doe their Idol? So hateful & odious a thing it is to the enemeys of the faith if so be any honour be exhibited vnto the most stout champions thereof.

Now they had remoued the Priest from the hurdle & had sett him vpon the cart, haueing put the rope about his necke they begine to pluck of his cloathes, when he casteth among the people his handkerchife, money, points, gloues, and such like guiftes, which euery one so greedily did catch & make so much esteeme of, that one of his kinn seeing nothing to fal to his share, cryed out with a loud voyce, saying, O Cosen Maxfilde, will you let me your cosen, goe without some smal guift or other from your hands? These are most certaine tokens of his innocencie when as so many, not of the abiect sort, but men of sound and ripe iudgement doe esteeme of things of no moment by (p. 27) reason of the vertue of the giuer, & doe so much couet & desier them; for there is none in whom is found any species of honestie that in the sight of all, will desier a wicked felowne to bestowe a guifte vpon him, & much lesse to beg one of a traytor & an enemey to his countrey.

There was present on horse-backe, I knowe not what heretical preacher, named Pourcase, who also, as it is reported, had written a book for the Atheisme against the romaine & catholike faith.* This

* This must have been Samuel Purchas, who was the author of Purchas, his Pilgrimage, and this is presumably the work which the writer of this tract calls "a book for the Atheisme against the romaine & catholike faith." The description is good-fellowe minister challenged, with a tumulteous clamor, him to dispute who nowe was at the point to dye & prepared therefore. The Priest of Christ reiected him, saying that he was not come hither to dispute, but to seal with his blood, as with a signet, the autoritie & faith of the Catholike Church.

The minister because he refused the challenge, vpbraided him crying that he was rude & ignorant of all learning, & that he could yeeld no reason for his faith he professed. With that one of the common sorte stood vp & said Fie, get thou hence with thy calumniations; as though the papists doe make their Priests such ignorant & vnfit men, & send them into this kingdome. But our Martyr more quietly answered the minister thus; My freind, thou hast made tryal before now what I am in learning & schoole-disputation; thou knowest also that these things are coyned by thyne owne braine: I beseech thee doe not before God & this people be-ly thyselfe, against me in any case especialy seeing thou art to give an account of these matters before the same tribunal vnto which I am now to be presented as a witnesse that all these things are but meere calumniations. (p. 28) But the sensles minister was more instant & vrged further saying, that he would vndertake for to teach a block-headed dunce of twelve yeares ould for to knowe as much within fouerteene dayes as our Priest should. Then a certaine gentleman of the company swore with a great oath, To the end, quoth he, thou wilt performe on this condition thou promisest, I will procure thee forty schollers, & for euery one a large stipend to be faithfully payed vnto thee.

The behoulders had so compassed about the Gallowes that they pressed the Magistrate & Officers, but the Sergeants beating them backe, one of them strooke the Martyr's Brother a great blow, vnto whom he thus spake; If this man were as neere in blood vnto thee as he is to me, thou wouldst, though neuer so barbarous, take it ill to be beaten away from his company & embracement being a dying. Why, who art thou? answered the Sergeant. I am, quoth he, this Priest's Brother; he knew him therefore & bad him be of good cheare & goe neerer & take his Brother by the hand, also secretly to speake with him.

Moreover from the tyme that this our Martyr was lead forth of prison vntil his death, his countenance was exceeding pleasant & chearful, as it becometh such as are designed vnto Martyrdome, in so much that many protestants obseruing it, swore that he often did smyle for ioy and seemed to contemne his death now present at hand. Whatsomever he spake, he vttered with mildnesse & great courage. Now to the end (p. 29) he might close up the last and that most doubtless unjust, yet not without some foundation in fact. Purchas treated of the Heathenish, Jewish, and Saracenicall religions . . . . . with their several Opinions, Idols, Oracles, &c. On the other hand he is prolific in denunciations of Popish "dreams," "lies," "pharasaisme," &c. A catholic, who only professed to know the book through "report," might easily speak of it as above. Purchas, who was once praised as "the English Ptolmey," has been of late severely criticised by Professor Laughton in the Dictionary of National Biography. He describes himself as "Minister of Eastwood in Essex." He is also said to have held the Rectory of St. Martin's, Ludgate. R. Newcourt, Repertorium Ecclesiasticum Parochiale Londinense, I, 1.

happie period of his life, he turned himselfe to the multitude, (who were about fouer thousand persons, and amongst them certaine of our cheife Gentrie,) and spake thus: I, Countrey-men, after many labours in studie vndertaken, retourned into this my countrey with a mind not to peruert any, or to withdrawe them from their fidelitie towards their king, the which I alwaies coueted might be kept inviolable, euen with my blood; but rather to reduce men's soules vnto the auncient faith of their predecessors & of the Catholike Church out of which there is no saluation. Neither did I intrude myselfe or came without any sending, or as a theefe & robber did I enter, as it is the condition & propertie of protestant-ministers so to doe; but I came fenced & confirmed with the sacred & that most heigh autoritie of the Apostolical sea from whence St. Augustine & his company came in tymes-past, who first of all brought the light of the true faith into this kingdome of Saxons, being wrapt within the darknesse of Idolatrie. Judge yee now whither yee will accounte your first Apostles vnfaithfull & false traytors to this countrey, for neither can yee condemne me a man of the same faith & religion with them, confirmed with the same autoritie for to exercise the same function which they have exercised, but that also yee will accuse them to be guiltie of the same crime of treason as me yee have. Out of this exordium of his speech he seemed to be willing to add many things more whereby to cleere such Priests as are in England from matters of treason, as also to shewe that that faith which our English now cal the ould religion, is (p. 30) the only saluation of soules, but the Shyreve commaunded him to silence, & the hangman to execute his office. Then conuerting himselfe to God he earnestly prayed him that he would protect the king, queene and royal progenie, togither with their kingdomes & people, that he would driue away & expel from them all euils as well spiritual as temporal, that liveing here in peace they might at length enioy an eternal happines. He prayed likewise for his persecutors forgiuing them this their sinn against him, & confessed that he forgave all those willingly who had any hand or counsel in this shedding of his blood. Twice or thrice he gave his benediction vnto all that were about him, which the greatest part receaved with their heads vncouered & inclined downe. At last lifting up his eyes & hands towards heauen he inuocated the diuine assistance, the Catholikes aideing him with their prayers & teares, of which I am an eye-witnesse. But whilst he repeated often amongst others this saying: In manus tuas Domine commendo spiritum meum; vnder this prayer some of them drew from vnder him the cart wherein he stood & so left him hanging at the Gallowes. By & by the Sergeants were moueing their halberts to cut the rope, that so leaping downe on the grounde half-aliue he might feel the greater paine by their disboweling of him. But many of the Gentrie taking this hainously cryed out against them, saying it was barbarous & tyrannical to search with knife & hand the entrals of a liue man; they should therefore let him hang vntil he was quite dead: (p. 31) wherefore after he had hung a quarter of an houer, the rope being cut he was disboweled, and his hart togither with al the rest of his entrals, were cast into a fier thereby; but his body quartered in foner parts & his head cut from the body were all buried neare vnto the Gallowes. Whilst all these things were in acting, wee Catholikes who had before implored for him the diuine assistance, did now beseech him, as being arived at the hauen of glorie, to render by his prayers the eternal maiestie propicius vnto vs.

The Magistrate had proclamed vnder paine of imprisonment, that none should touch or presume to take with him any of the blood or flesh of the Priest, or so much as the strawe that was sprinkled with his blood, or any thing of his garments. Neither yet could they looke so narrowly to this comaund of his, but that many did expose themselues to the daunger of imprisonment to the end they might departe rich with such holy pledges & carry them away to their houses.

The same morning & same place, thirteene other male-factours were hanged for other wickednesse. But when the martyrdome of the Priest was ended, almost al the whole multitud departed, as disdaining to be present at the deathe of others. Also very early in the morning before that our Martyr was brought out of the prison, they had prouided a wooman who had killed her husband, to be burned in Smithfilde, to the end they might withdrawe many of the spectatours from this our tragedie; but all in vaine, (p. 32) for all that were of any condition & unto whom their necessarie businesse could give them leaue, did accompany the Martyr & guarded him on each side vpon horses, others had occupied places in the streetes, others to see him dye went before into the fieldes. For naturally wee esteeme no sight more famous or goodly then to see a man, singular for his merits & pietie, but compassed with most bad fortune to fight nevertheles with a most valiant & heigh courage of minde, for there are battels fought which no doubte shall haue happie euents; there euery most paineful labour is a most ioyful matter of glorie; there to dye is to rise eternaly, & there to merit to dye is the beginning of a life most fluent with the fellowship & participation of all good things.

The woonted fruits & benefit of soules followed by this Martyrdome, for many by this example were inflamed to undergoe the like; others made more courageous in their faith; those who wauered were confirmed, who before beleeued not, now were moued to embrace the Catholike faith. To conclude, the testimonie of our true faith is seene for the most part vnto all, to be renowned, famous & most firme: wee are brought indeed into these tymes that vnto many, most frequent examples are shewen of such deuotion & constancie towards God & the Catholike Church.

I cannot keep silent the singular pietie & boldnesse of a certaine woeman. Some gaue vnto the Shyreue thanks for that he permitted the Priest to hang vntil he was dead; but she supposing also that thanks ought to be rendred by her, but vnto a better Maister, & for a greater benefit, cryed out so that all might heare her; (p. 33) Gloria in Excelsis Deo; for the Conuersion of England; for the Conuersion of England. Certainly it seemed vnto this pious woeman that next after the passion & merits of Christ, such stones as were pulled by schisme away from the Church, could not be conioyned againe by any other lime or mortar then by the sacred blood of the Martyrs of Christ; nor could it be but that the earth being sowed & watered therewith most abundantly should in short space bring forth most delightful fruits of the true Catholike faith, togither with such solide vertues as therence doe proceede & bud forth.

The Magistrate & Sergeants had vnderstood that Catholikes were very earnest & desierous of [the] holy Martyrs reliques. Therefore to deceaue them of their hope, they open a pit of a wounderous depth & therein cast the torne & severed body, & vpon it they laye two other putrified carkasses of two malefactors that had layne stincking in rottennesse & wch a mounth before they had hanged & buried vnder ground; then upon these they pyle those thirteen bodys that were seene that day put to death, & so at last covered all with a great heape of earth, supposing by this meanes none would be so bould, or rather so mad, as they thought, to bestowe so great a labour, & to feel those stenches in digging out so many carkasses as there were put in, knowing it withall to be forbidden on paine of death. Notwithstanding the deuotion & bouldnesse of the faithful ouercame the counsel of the heretikes, for being inuironed with darknesse & defended with a strong arme, they dig forth the members with the head, & carrie them away to be kept with honour & veneration.

It was reputed a wonder (p. 34) or indeed the prouidence of Almightie God, for when they had laboured al night & yet had not obtained their desiers, the white and beautiful dawning of the day appearing, did oppresse and terrefie these pious theeues, & fearing the morning labours of the husbandmen, as also the multitude of the passengers on the heigh way, their harts failed them & altogither despaired of ever obtaining what they desired. When therefore this they meditated onely, & how they might betake themselves safely into the citie, behould sodainly such a misty darknesse from aboue by the interposition of a most thicke cloud did compasse them, as that more through the vse of their eares then their sight they discerned on another. Being therefore thus secure of the diuine presence, they make an end of what was lefte of their labour; they dig forth the reliques and retourne ioyful & enriched with those sacred pledges. When they had now placed them in their houses out of all daunger, the mist straitwayes was dispersed as if it had thus onely serued with its darknesse to hide that pious thefte. God is woont to moderate every thing with that sweetnesse, that, whom he doth crowne with honor & glorie in heauen, the same these dumbe Elements & intercourses of things might waite vpon on earth, & this to the end he himselfe might be admirable in his Saints, & wee truely sing that of the psalmist Nimis honorati sunt amici tui Deus, nimis confortatus est principatus eorum.—"Thy freindes, O God, are become honourable exceedingly, their principalitie is exceedingly strengthened."

After that the Martyr was condemned he had begune an Epistle the which he could neuer absolue, by reason of many resorting then often vnto him, as also the Sergeants searching. Notwithstanding wee thought it worthy, least it should be lost, to add the fragment as a testament of the most holy Man.

(p. 35) TO HIS MOST DEARE MOTHER, BRETHEREN & SISTERS.

When now I had bid adue vnto the world, & onely a fewe houres disioyned me & death, thither doe I bestowe all my care & thoughts, that those to whom I was most conioyned by bloud in this life, I might haue companions and partakers with me in an eternal, vnto which I now goe. That therefore which I doe beseech & beg of you by the bowels of loue & perfect Charitie, & by these last wordes of me your brother now laying downe his life for the faith, is, that if yee loue your Soule's Salvation, or haue in esteeme God Almightie's honour, yee haue care so to liue in this world that yee may liue also eternaly. Yee hould the best forme of all, embrace it therefore, followe after Justice & imitate the excellent pietie of a good Christian; abhorre all vices & sinnful staine of the minde: conserve peace wth your neighbours, for whose life vertue doth accompanie, a sempiternal glorie will followe their death. There is no need for me to pricke yee forewards with any other spurrs then with this, which though it be a domestical, yet is it a most cleere example of pietie, our father I meane, obserue him therefore before your eyes, who suffering frequent persecutions for faith & justice did also at last undergoe with a chearful & courageous minde the most vniust sentence of death . . . . . .

APPENDIX.

SIX ORIGINAL LETTERS OF THE MARTYR AND AN ACCOUNT OF HIS RELICS.

Five of the seven autograph letters here printed, are now in the Archives of the See of Westminster, and have not yet been published, or at least not integrally. Letters II, V, VI, and VII are kept apart in a small portfolio. The third and fourth are at St. Edmund's College, Ware, and have been printed by Dr. Burton in The Edmundian for January, 1903, but not in the original spelling in which, with his kind aid, they now appear.

As might have been expected, they illustrate the generosity, piety and amiability of the Martyr in a way which no biographer could possibly do. They are, however, written with a certain studied obscurity, usual in Catholic correspondence of this date, for there was always the danger of a letter being intercepted, and proving fatal both to writer and friends if its meaning was too clear. A certain disciplina arcani was therefore used; Catholics were generally mentioned under feigned names, and Catholic institutions of all sorts are alluded to very indefinitely. This was found to be as a rule safer than the use of ciphers, which at once attracted attention and raised suspicions, even where they were not understood. Letters like our Martyr's might seem at first glance to contain no secrets at all. Nevertheless, the difficulty in understanding them is greater than appears, and a few words of introduction to each will be appropriate.

The letters begin with the return of Maxfield from Douay. He landed, he says, on July 22, 1615, at Ratcliffe, a riverside hamlet, the name of which has gradually vanished since the fire of 1794. Limehouse Docks have swallowed up much of the site, and the once celebrated Ratcliffe Highway is now lost in the prosaic name of Commercial Road. The Martyr at once betook himself to a Mr. Harries, a priest and a prisoner in the Gatehouse, evidently "the most intimate friend" mentioned in the life, and, as appears from the close of this letter and from No. IV, an intermediary between Maxfield and the Seminary at Douay. When the records of this period have been better arranged, we shall no doubt be able to identify him and most of the other persons referred to, though at present I cannot ascertain who he was, and believe the name to have been an alias.

As Maxfield thinks it necessary to explain why he has stayed in London, we may perhaps assume that his original plan was the usual one of returning to his native county, in this case to Staffordshire. But he did not at first find "an opportunitie to traffic in his trade," that is a vacant post or chaplaincy. So he patiently "set up his staff" in London because of certain business, and then found other good work to his hand.

The business was in reality not his, but that of his correspondent, William Ferrar. This man afterwards rose to some distinction among the secular clergy, and was appointed their "agent" at Rome. (Dodd, Church History, vol. ii, p. 386.) At present there were two cousins of his, Marie and Anne Golding, who desired to be nuns, though, because of the above-mentioned need of secrecy, this word is not once mentioned. The Goldings belonged to the Nottingham family of Coulston Basset. The eldest brother, Edward, whose marriage with Eleanor Throgmorton is mentioned later, was the first baronet of that line. In his old age he became a Capuchin, and died at Rouen. Frances is mentioned in the Visitation of 1614 (Harleian MSS., 1555 and 1400) as his eldest sister, of whom we now hear that she has married a younger son of the great Yorkshire family of Ingleby. Judging from the tone of her conversation with our Martyr, she seems to have been a Protestant, though "by nature a right Goulding." He more or less reconciles her with the idea, which at first seemed "impossible," of the sisters becoming nuns, and hoped that he might be able to do her more good later.

Marie and Anne both entered convents, Marie among the Carmelites at Gravelines, where she was professed in 1617, being then 22 years of age, and was afterwards transferred to Aire. As to Anne, it would seem almost certain that she is to be identified with the Ursula Golding of whom a fairly long history is told in the Chronicle of St. Monica's at Louvain (Ed. Hamilton, 1905, vol. i, p. 197), the more so as Sister Mary Alphonsus, to whom I am indebted for most of this information, tells me that from certain variants in another MS. copy of their chronicle, she surmises that Sister Theresa (as Ursula or Anne afterwards became) had actually been with the Carmelites before she came to Louvain.

The connection of Ferrar with these Goldings I am unable to determine, nor that with "cousin Hughesbies," nor with the "two good cousins with you." (See Letters III and IV.) It would also be interesting to find the name of Ferrar's brothers. The first mentioned of them, though he remained "steefe" in his Protestantism, was very kind to Maxfield, becoming an intermediary for his letters, and even visiting him when in prison. The "Parsin's gamine of bakine eatine att Pimligoe" would seem to be a sort of quaint password from brother to brother, presumably referring to some joke or adventure.

In the latter half of the letter comes a lament "concerning my boocks." Perhaps there is nothing more here than meets the eye; not improbably, however, his whole store of vestments and "church stuffe" may have been included under this title. The reference to the "verie wise, prudent and religiose man, Mr. Carie," is probably also of greater importance than it may seem to be. The Martyr has hitherto made no allusion to the Archpriest and Assistants, under whose jurisdiction he had now passed. Perhaps one of these dignitaries is here alluded to, possibly Collington, who is mentioned again in Letter VI.

The following letter is from the Westminster Archives, vol. xiv, p. 429:—

I.

Good Mr Farare.

As I haue once and againe from St Omers and Duncker writt vnto y^u^, soe now the 3. time from London, wher on St Marie Magdaline day att night I and my cōpanion safly arrived, putting a shore att Ratclef hora nona, and since haue had soe good success in all my busines and freindly entertainment of those to whom by Mr [? P]* (whom always I most esteeme no other then my ffather) I was commended; yt wthout impeachment of a thankfull and gratefull mind I cannot but impute it to his sacred protection, in whose power I euer repossed a firme hope, quia nunquam derelinquit presumentes in se. Hetherto I haue no opportunie to traffick in my trade, but most haue patience, as my frends tell me, till time worke a way. I haue takin a Chamber in the Strand, wher Mr Harries directed me; frugall I most be, yet honest means I hope I shall not want; I haue resolued here to sett vp my stafe till micheelmasse terme.

I haue Mr ffarare bine more carefull of the busines in yr Cosins behalfe then yu could haue desiered me, and but to day spooke wth yr Brother informing him as much as yu requested me in that busines: how itt stands he will informe yu by letter. The munnie should haue bine payed yu three weecks since according to order taken by her freinds. I recommended yu to him in the best manner, he much wonders what yu maine, as he sayeth to spend yr selfe in vnprofitable studies, when he thinketh yu are lerned enugh, as yr letter to him and his brother made good remonstrance. He vsed me as kindly as I had bine his Brother. I put him in mind of the Parsins gamine of bakine eatine att Pimligoe.

I was lywise wth yr Cosin Frances Go[uld]ing now a married wife to a Yorkshier Gentleman of . . . . . † hundred a yeare. I saluted her from her sister Marie who writt to her by me, and certyfied her of all her sisters courses and resolution, as Mris Marie willed me. Whereatt she sometime did sigh saying, Alas will she take such a course and not returne? and much other good conference we had of her and her sister Anne, att wch she euer feched a deepe sigh: but I finding her by nature to be a right Goulding, and my selfe well disposed to talke, did vnfould to her their contentment and yt albeit their worldly freinds might thinke them fooles to [? disposses] them selues of all good fortune and preferment; yet soe Christ fooles yt thei would not change their estates to be made Queens of the earth; at wch she seemed to be amazed as vnpossible, yet exceeding glad to heare so well of them, she meaneth to writt backe to them. I shall peraduenture haue further occasion of [p. 430] more familiaritie wth her. Yr Cosin [. .] Edward is married some 8 mounth a goe to Mris Frogmorton, who brought him two thousand pounds as yr Brother tould me—yu shall here of these matters from such as can better informe yu then I.

Concerning my boocks, Mr Farare, I was the [most] vnfortunate man aliue, who through foolish persuasion of diuers att St Omers obiecting the impossibilitie of conueance and theminent danger to hazard my selfe wth them, leaft them at St Omers with Mr Acton, being promised to have them sent by safere means, but after thei certified me being att Duncker reddie to goe, yt thei could not procure any means, when in the mean time I lost the best opportunitie yt euer was to haue passed them ouer. I am now in great hazard to lose them all, except by this bearer any thing may be done. Thei§ are yet I suppose wth Mr Acton as I gaue direction from Duncker, if I can vse noe meane to procure them brought, I will writt heareafter that thei may be sent to y^u^, and if their bee any charges in returning them backe to y^u^, I will defray it. I pray as not only a freind but as my brother of whom I most euer account, yt, if it so hapine out, y^u^ haue specially care of them. I would make noe boones if I were a gayne to come ouer to conueaye a whole truncke full of bookes ouer, but nothing in such busines is a greater enimie then feare ingendred vpon some accident, yt happeneth once in 3 or 4 yeares. My cōpanion was att all shadoes soe fearfully distracted y^t^ I would not for 20 powneds we had come in any danger, he would haue betread a 100 men, soe much it importeth wth whom a man cometh. I my selfe was thought by other passingares to be some panieos,* though in English attire, or some other carelesse Fellow, as after the Sceeper being asked did answere. This for those matters.

Newes here their is none, their is a Spanish lady† y^t^ hath much labored for to [? delyver] some prisoners, but cannot preuayle, except she would passe her honorable word y^t^ thei should not returne agayne into England. I was this day wth Mr Carie whoe vsed me most respectedly, giueing me both good Counsell, aduise and direction wth a Angell of Gould; hereafter I shall haue much comfort from him as I hope surely he is a verie wise prudent and religiouse man. If y^u^ aske why I should desier to liue in London I answere because it is a place whose abomination will make a man to abandon ye world, if any thing in the world will; for it will make any religiouse hart greeue to see, heere and obserue ye extreme impietie pride and iniquitie y^t^ reaigneth in London. And the greatest playge of all, as some wise men haue tould me, is y^t^ forreine Catholike princes seeme not to compassionate wth vs, or once to speake in our behaulfe for a mittigation, such as Catholikes giue to sectaries in other nations.

M^r^ farare I presume to writt to y^u^ these friuolous lines to desier y^u^ as opportunitie shall serue to writt to me, and if in any thing I can plesure y^u^ y^u^ know Thomas Field. What I say, if itt be possible Ile performe. It is time now to cease, wherfore I bid y^u^ farewell knowing y^u^ will doe my commendations to all in particulare. Forgett not to pray for y^r^ freinde, who since he parted wth y^u^, neuer hath had opportunitie to say ( )§ for him selfe or any other. A die, M^r^ farare. [ij] [In another hand] "Letters writt by Mr Maxefielde our martyr to Mr Farrare."

II.

The next letter, if read without any comment, will seem a somewhat obscure effusion. The clue to it is given by Bishop Challoner, who writes under the heading of Robert Sutton (the first of the two martyrs of that name): "I have at present before me a letter written from England by Mr. John Cleaton, an eye-witness [Challoner did not know this was an alias of our Martyr], concerning a person possessed by a furious devil, who was wonderfully delivered by the relics of Mr. Robert Sutton." Challoner had before him not our original, but a copy sent him by Dr. Alban Butler, which is still preserved at Oscott College, Birmingham, and of which a copy has been kindly supplied me by the Rev. C. E. Evans. I cannot discover whether the Martyr ever sent the fuller "notice and intelligence" of the affair, as he "hoped" to be able to do, or whether, if he did so, it still survives.

The most interesting point seems to be the connection between Maxfield and the martyr whose relics were used during the exorcism. The venerable Robert Sutton had been arrested, it seems, while visiting certain Catholic prisoners in Stafford Gaol, and amongst them, William Macclesfield (or Maxfield), our Martyr's father. On this Sutton was condemned and executed, and Macclesfield sentenced to death, a sentence which was afterwards commuted to imprisonment for life, and this, in turn, led to our Martyr having been born in prison. It is therefore easy to conjecture with what earnestness he would have assisted at the weird scene, to which here, under the disciplina arcani of which we have spoken, he can only vaguely allude.

The mention of the relic of Sutton is also of interest, because it is highly probable that the identical relic is actually preserved amongst us still. Father John Gerard relates that when one of Father Sutton's quarters was carried off by Catholics from the place where it had been exposed, it was found that the thumb and forefinger, which had been anointed at his ordination, remained intact, though the rest of the bones had been picked clean by the birds. Father Gerard (who by the way differs from the above quoted authority as to the place of Sutton's arrest, and states that it took place "in the house of a relative of mine") obtained the thumb, had it enclosed in a fine reliquary, which, with Gerard's authentication, is still preserved at Stonyhurst College. Writing from abroad in 1630, Gerard says the relic was then still in England. (Acts of English Martyrs, pp. 323–326.) It may therefore have been the identical relic referred to by Maxfield.

There exists also a smaller relic of the same martyr, a piece of bone 1½ inches long, with the contemporary inscription, "A relique of B. Fa. Sutton Mar.," enclosed in a silver reliquary, about 3 inches long, inscribed "Ven. F. Rob. Sutton Mar.," which belonged to the Blundells of Crosby.

The names of Edward Johnson, who conducted the exorcism, and of Mr. Smith, who inquired into it, I have not been able to identify. In Letter IV he speaks again of "Mr. Edmonds, with you called Johnson," of whom "the world ringeth."

The letter is addressed to Mr. Mathew Pemberton or Penberton, an alias for Dr. Kellison, of whose relations to the writer more must be said under Letter V. There is no date, but the mention of a letter from Kellison, shows that a month or so must have elapsed since Maxfield had come to England.

The Oscott copy is found at page 339 of a volume with the title in Dr. Kirk's hand, "Alban Butler's Collection for Bp. Challoner's Lives of Missionary Priests. Given me by Charles Butler, Esq." The copy is not in Alban Butler's hand, but he has added the headline, "From an original letter without any direction."

Worshippfull S^r^

More then the remembrance of my loue and humble dutie wth all harttie thankes for your worthy consell and admonitions (wch I purpose euer by gods assistance to hyde in sinu meo and vigilently to obserue tanquam monita paterna) it shall not be needfull at this present to writt by this bearer, to whom[1] I haue imparted the whole [miserable][2] estate of my present condition and what else I desire y^r^ worshipp to be made acquainted wth all; and especially of a wonderfull worke here latly effected by the great power and goodnesse of god, and by the merits mediation and reliques of his holy S^t^ and martyr of y^r^ house (by name Robert Sutton) and also by the ministerie of one Edward Jhonsonne scholler and priest of y^r^ house well known to many wth y^u^, to the admiration and astonishment of all, and no lesse comfort to all well disposed y^t^ ether saw it (wch were many of good worth, vnderstanding and great pietie), for y^t^ the businesse was halfe a yeare in hand, in wch interim as many [came] as durst for the seeming[3] ineuitable danger through the horreble lowd noise and rowring of the Diuill as though he would haue raised the whole downe, but more to affright the spectatours as it proued, then the discreing[4] of the businesse, wch was his malicious purpose as after he confessed. And this truly was a wonder if not a miracle, y^t^ soe terrable and extreame noise should be confined wth in the precincts of a Chamber, all windows doores and other passiges lying open, on ether[5] hand of it: and the relation of the beginning progresse and issue together wth most remarcable circumstances y^t^ did occurre in the same businesse, all wch haue bine so diligently examined by such as best might, I meane Mr Smith and others and confirmed wth such vndeniable proofes as thei confesse to the glorie of god and confusion of his enimies: hic erat digitus dei.

The rest I remitt to the bearers relation, till I can gett an exact copie of the whole wch I hope wilbe shortly. What he shall tell y^u^ from me I protest, being my selfe to the most an eye witnesse, to be true. And thus much I thought good in breefe to giue y^u^ to vnderstand of y^t^, wherof hereafter I hope y^u^ will haue a fuller notice and intelligence. Soe god protect y^u^ wth all y^rs^ and make me partaker of y^r^ good prayers.

Yours euer most obedient John Cleaton.

A great change has come over our Martyr since the last letter. He was arrested on November 1st, and has now passed three weeks in prison. Nevertheless, he begins with a joke, was "verie merrie," and "never better content," for his cause made "the pressure of his prison verie pleasant." His lament is for the loss of his "church stuffe" and missal, and he begs Farrer to send him another. In the next note we hear that the missal has been sent, though Maxfield had not yet received it.

He complains also of being "polled" by the prison keepers, and in the next note speaks of their "greedy exactions." The proof is clear. The regular fees for the Gatehouse charge in 1603 were 12*s.* 4*d.* the week for priests and poorer prisoners, and 16*s.* 4*d.* for the well-to-do,* so that the charge of 25*s.* a week imposed on our Martyr would seem to be exactly twice as much as could be justified. In his last letter Maxfield calls himself the "poor debtor" to Kellison, and the words seem to have been employed in their literal sense. Presumably he had to draw on the generosity of friends for his sustenance in prison.

"Yr Mr" seems to mean Your Master, i.e. Dr. Kellison, the President, to whom he probably wrote by the same bearer. Mr. Barname Mounke, the pursuivant Bonnie, and Hierome, Canterbury's man, are all unknown quantities. Mounk may perhaps be not a name, but a descriptive epithet, signifying that Mr. Barnham was a Benedictine.

Good Mr. Farrare,

Al health to yr person and libertie to me. I am now a poore prisoner att the Gatehouse, where yu may be sure to find me. The manner of my apprehention inquire of yr Mr. I am verie merrie, thankes be to God, and never better content. My cause releeveth all other aggreevances and maketh the pressure of prisonment verie pleasant. Our cōpany is to our contentment. Here is yr ould frend Mr. Barname Mounke. We drink to yu often, although wee eate but once a day, and yet lye att 25*s.* charges a weeke, soe are we pould.

Yr good brother vouchsafeth to visite us some times whom yet God's spirrite hath not visited, for yt he remaineth steefe in his opinion. The pursuivant Bonnie tooke all my Church stuffe and wth all my Missall wch did most greeve me and more for yt it is not to be had agayne. All other things I hope to gett out of his hands by Hierome's meanes, Canterburie's man. If ye could send me at once such another of the best manner, I should thinke my selfe extreemely behoulding to yu. I will defray the charges, God will, faithfully to yu or any other as yu shall give me direction. Thuse wishing yu to doe my best cōmendation to all good Frends, I end this 22 of Novem., 1615,

IV.

So far from failing under the strain of imprisonment, the Martyr's spirits have now risen higher still. "This night" (words which indicate that the letter also was written at night stealthily) he has been cheered by good news from Douay. The college had of late come under the vigorous administration of Dr. Kellison, Maxfield's hero, and we may suppose that some new benefit of his rule had then declared itself. With regard to affairs in England, he was "at the height of hopeful expectation, for that besides Catholics are strongly confident, even the pillars of protestancy shake with fear, and, I hope, shortly will ruinate." It is hard to conjecture what the Martyr had in mind here. The immediate future did not justify his hopes, and it was not for some years, when the negociations for the Spanish match were well advanced, that the lot of the Catholics improved. On the contrary, the persecution was then growing sharper; blood had begun to flow again on the scaffolds, and he was himself to suffer soon.

Still, there were some grounds for the Martyr's anticipations. Queen Anne of Denmark was becoming more earnest in her Catholicism,* and King James had just made up his mind to prosecute the match with Spain. We have already seen in the Life and at the end of the first letter how much importance Maxfield attached (and rightly) to the intercession of foreign Catholic powers.

Several of the persons to whom he here commends himself, can be identified. "My most dear Master Mr. Pemb." is of course Dr. Kellison. "Mr. Rosse with all of your ranke," will be the same as the Gulielmus Rosseus who, with seven others, was of the same "ranke" or standing at Douay as Farrer, and had been ordained priest with him. (Douay Diaries, p. 21.) "Mr. Lowe and his sons" (or at least the sons), will be the Gulielmus Lous and Joannes Leus [sic] mentioned in the same place. "Edmundus Stratford" also occurs, but he is perhaps too late to be identified with "Mr. Starford."

Rd. Sr,

This night I saw a letter of y^rs^ to Mr Harries wch gave me surely great cause of comfort to understand y^t^ matters wth y^u^ are come to so good an issue, and I hope God will verifie his p̃mise patientia pauperū non peribit in finē. Long we have suffered an almost unsupportable burden both here and ther, but I hope ere long our sorrowes will meete in a point of joyfull exultation, for as y^u^ writt, things goe well wth y^u^, so certainly here matters were never att ye height of hopefull expectation as the are now. For y^t^ besides Catholikes are strongly confident, even the pillers of protestancy shake wth feare and, I hope, shortly will ruinate. Cōmend the matter to God in yr good prayers and expect awhile wth patience.

I have not yet, good Sr, the Miss: y^u^ sent me, but I hope I shall shortly; the monie howsoever, I will shortly send y^u^. If I misse not in my purpose [y^u^] shall heare ere long of my libertie. It is well y^t^ you receyved the gloves I sent y^u^. I would fitt you wth more such cōmodities if my purse would speake or my keeppresse not too greedelie exact of me.

Commend me, I beseech, first and cheefly to my most deare Master, Mr Pemb., to Mr Rosse wth all of y^r^ ranck. To Mr Lowe and his sonns, to Mr Starfort. Perhaps the most significant sentence in the last letter was, "If I miss not in my purpose you shall hear ere long of my liberty." This open statement perhaps alludes to some attempt to gain freedom by open means; but, however this may be, he soon after made an attempt to escape secretly, with the result already known, and now he writes as a doomed man.

In Letters V and VI he bids adieu to Kellison and Farrer, the dearest friends he has in the world. Of his warm affection for Kellison every letter in this series speaks unaffectedly. In the first he is one "whom always I most esteem, no other than my father." In the second he offers him "the remembrance of his love and humble dutie with all hearty thanks for his worthy counsel and admonitions." In the third and sixth the mention is not forgotten, though no comment is added. In the fourth, "my most dear Master." In this his devotion to his Alma Mater and to its most worthy President overflows. Never have they received a nobler tribute of praise.

The youth here commended with so much kindly consideration, persevered in his vocation. Edward Kinsman, of London, was made priest at Douay on the 24th of October, 1627. (Douay Diaries, p. 22.)

prosperitie of that house both in lyfe and after death. I am forced deare good S^r^ to be breefe through the much cōpanie, y^t^ cōeth to me att this present, and other necessarie businesse. But I hope y^u^ will pardon me and accept of thes as a token of a great good will. I am your poore debter and if I liue I will on day defray all, if otherways I know y^u^ will remitt it.

Deare S^r^ I make bould in thes ensuing tymes hūbly to intreat and request y^u^ in the behaulfe of this bearer y^t^ it may y^u^ please euen for god sake to intertaine him if it be possible y^u^ may. A Letter to Mr. Harvey about the Martyr's Relics.

The signature of the writer (as well as one passage and three names) has been carefully blotted out. All we can say is that he must have been a dependent (perhaps the chaplain) of some lord, the first letter of whose name would seem to be f.—except that there was no Catholic lord whose title had that initial.

The late Father Stanton has endorsed the portfolio in which this letter is preserved with these words: "A letter enclosing a relic of V. Thomas Maxfield, viz: a flower which he carried in his hand to Tyburn. The flower is now in a red paper, and seems to be the calix of a pink." The packet of red paper, with its enclosure, is still reverently preserved within the letter.

The writer of this letter was evidently unaware that the Martyr's body had been recovered by Catholics It should be here added that the Spanish Ambassador took it home with him when he left England. In Spain it was carefully preserved by the descendants of the Count of Gondomar, and when, in recent years, Dom Gilbert Dolan re-identified the relics, the modern representative of that house gave him a large share of the bones, which are now preserved at Downside.

No. IV.

MEMOIR OF EDMUND MATHEW

THE account of the Edmund Pointz, vere Mathew (Matthew, Mathews or Mathewes), here printed from a contemporary MS., was written purely "for edification." The biographer just gives us the name of his hero, but otherwise says nothing as to who he was, and habitually calls him by a surname that was not his own. For what is boyish and merely human he has no care, which is the more to be regretted, as we are told that the boy "wanted not life and vigour at his play" (p. 10). The sketch is therefore devoid of much of the charm, which a more skilful artist would have imparted to it, and the jewels of mystical language, with which our author has ornamented his pages, are in the rococo style, and can scarcely be considered as an improvement.

Underneath these quaint mannerisms, however, there lies not a little of genuine history. It is perhaps the earliest English account of a Catholic boy of his years which we possess. Even the weak point of the book, its unskilful insistence on pietism, its over emphasised rejection of flesh and blood, tells us unmistakably of those hard times, when aloofness from this world was a stern necessity, when few other consolations could be counted on save those of prayer and spirituality.

The notice also contains several references to the customs and terms used in St. Omers College. These are interesting because many of them still survive at Stonyhurst, which maintains uninterrupted the school life which little Mathew so much appreciated more than two centuries ago. The Mass for health on the feast of St. Martina (the origin of which is, I believe, otherwise unknown), here finds its explanation (cf. MS., pp. 1, 18, 20). There are many references to the "Sodality," in connection with which I may refer to the papers on the St. Omers Sodality in recent numbers of the Stonyhurst Magazine, by Father Herbert Lucas, S.J. We find also the terms "composition days, as we terme them" (p. 20), "Study place" (p. 25), "school" for class in "Grammar Scole" (pp. 6, 21, 30), before reaching which the boy passed through "little figures" (p. 16). Whether the word "line" is used for 'division' on page 18, seems doubtful. There are of course frequent references to the somewhat Spartan discipline of those early days. Correction was given by "strokes over the hand with a rod" (p. 16). They went to bed at 9 and rose at 5 (pp. 13, 18), and during the heat of summer went to the "refuge," by which I suppose the villa-house is meant, of the English Jesuit Novices, which was at Watten, not far off (p. 12). The boys were then (as ever) fond of cherries, apples and sugar-plums (p. 18), and played much at ball and trap-ball (pp. 15, 19). The preparing "himself in thirty Psalms by his private diligence besides his schoole duties" gives us very much the same thing as the "extraordinary" of to-day (pp. 21, 30).

Speaking Latin, and getting up Greek, "having neither Lexicon nor Radices Linguæ Græcæ, books very necessary for that enterprise" (p. 21), are forms of mental gymnastic, now happily abandoned, but "acting" (p. 43) is still deservedly held in honour at Stonyhurst.

It would also be well to gather together the data for determining the identity of the subject of our biography. Though his exact place in their genealogical tree remains uncertain, there can be no doubt that he belongs to the Mathews of Thurles, co. Tipperary. This follows from the use of Pointz as his alias. It was usual in those days to use as an alias the mother's name, or that of some other relative, and the Mathews of Thurles had intermarried with the Pointz family of Iron Acton in Gloucester. Captain George Mathew, son of Edward Mathews of Radyr [Reader] in Glamorgan, and progenitor of the Mathews of Thurles, Thomastown and Annfield, had gone to Ireland in 1610. After the death of Thomas Butler, Viscount Thurles, heir to the Earl of Ormonde and Ossory, who was drowned 15 December, 1619, George Mathew married his widow Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Pointz of Acton (or Iron Acton), Gloucester. By her he had three children, Theobald, George and Frances, and eventually died at Thurles, May, 1673, aged 86. The daughter became a Poor Clare; Theobald, the heir, married a daughter of Sir Valentine Browne

(ancestor of Lord Kennard), and he had an heir, George, who on the 6th of August, 1677, was created LL.D. of Oxford, by the Chancellor, James, Duke of Ormonde, his uncle. This George is presumably the brother of our Edmund "Pointz."

But Captain George also had various brothers: Edmund, who accompanied him to Ireland, and Anthony, William and David, who remained in England, the last named becoming Mayor of Cardiff. They seem to have all been Catholics. Thus it would seem that our boys may also have descended from Edmund, but the presumption is that the "grandmother" mentioned on page 3 was the quondam Viscountess of Thurles. On page 14 we hear that his mother was dead; so when, on page 10, we read of parents in the plural, we must take that word in the French rather than in the English sense.

Edmund died on the 27th of September, 1667, after two and a half years at school, and was "scars past twelve years ould, when he came to College." According to this, he would have been born early in 1653. His cousin George had died on his way home to Ireland, about 1666, and his brother George survived him. Perhaps this was the George Mathews who married Eleanor, widow of Lord Cahir. We also have on record that a George Mathew of Thurles married a Margaret Butler. Either of these (if indeed they are not the same person) might have been the George of our story.—Information furnished by Father Edmund Hogan, S.J., Mr. C. H. Mathews of Chelsfield. Lodge (ed. Archdall, 1789), vol. iv, pp. 38, 39, vol. vii, 222, &c. See also J. O'Hart, Irish Pedigrees (1881), p. 482.

As to the author's name I cannot form any conjecture. He tells us that he "thought himself obliged to speak some part of what he knew"—so that he was evidently familiar with the lad, but in what capacity does not appear.

The manuscript is a small volume, 5¾ in. by 3¾ in., in black pigskin, unlettered. It contains three small treatises—(1) A Spirituall Observation on the ground layd by St Ignatius, 18 ff.; (2) Aspirations of a contrite heart; (3) F. Lancisius's Life of Mary Buonaventura; (4) The relation of Edmund Poins. It is written in one contemporary hand, with great care, the words here in italics being in red. The copyist was perhaps a foreigner, for he (or she) writes 'prouocque' for 'provoke' (p. 12), which an English person would hardly do. Some words are, if I may say so, ultra English, as 'dimb' for 'dim' (p. 30), 'yused,' 'yumour,' for 'used' and 'humour,' and 'wrater' and 'wrather' for 'rather.'

At the beginning is written, "For the use of Str Hellen with leave of Superiours." At the end, "This Book belongs To Sr Hellen." In one corner, in another hand, $\frac{L.9}{1789}$, perhaps an old library mark. If a date, its coincidence with the French Revolution seems significant. The volume belonged to the late Father John Morris, S.J., and is now in the Library of the Postulator of the English Martyrs at Farm Street.

A RELATION OF WHAT WAS OBSERVED IN EDMUND POINS WHO LIVED IN YE ENglish Seminary of St Omers like an Angel, and rested in our Lord the 27 of September, in the yeare 1667.

OUR ENGLISH SEMINARY

at Saint Omers, hath been very happy for the good example and vertuous Conuersation of three Youths of the family of the Mathews; which is their true name, borne in Ireland and sent hither for their education. Two of them where Brothers, George and Edmund, who took heer the name of Poins, the third their Cosen German was George Mathews. The 2 Georges being dangerously sick in the begining of the yeare 1666 where very strangely cured by the intercession of the glorious virgin Martyr ST MARTINA whose sacred relicques, that had been kept obscurely in our Sodality began about that time to be taken notice of, and to bee held in great honour and esteeme. George Mathews (for of George Poins who is living Ile forbeare to speake) after so signal a favour received from his good Patronesse, it is wonderfull how gratefull he showed himself vnto her, and although he alwais had been very exemplar in his Conuersation, yet after his recouery he seemed to breath a new aire, to haue more lofty thoughts and to becom quite an other man. But nothing was so (p. 2) remarcable in him as a most louely and candid innocency and simplicity, which gaue occasion to him that gouerned his Consciens not onely often to say of him, but also to write once in Confidence to a freind, that he thought Almighty God woold soone call that youth to heauen, for that he perceiued him dayly more and more transformed into that happy and innocent state of Litle ones whom our Sauiour sais the kingdom of heauen belongs vnto: And so it fell out, for not long after when he was in perfect health, being caled back into his Country much against his will (for he desired to end the Cours of his studdies heere) he fell sick at London or wrather* in the way at Ostend, where he expected a long while a secure passage and although he was on the mending hand when he departed from London to Ireland, yet the diuine goodnesse that pleased it self much in that precious soule woold not expose it to the hazard of this wicked age.

The Letters that caled George from St Omers intimated that in all probability the other two where soone to follow him, which afflicted them both very much, and litle EDMUNDS zeale proceeded so far as to say he woold not go if he were sent for, though being aduised by the Father to whom he expressed this resolution, that he was to obey his Parents, he presently conformed him self to Gods will and was reddy to do what his Parents should determine concerning him. Yet he wrott by his Cosen (p. 3) vnto his Grandmother, beseeching her to diuert his Father from his designe of taking him thence. Our Lord heard the prayers of both the brothers, for hither to they have not been sent for. And that litle EDMUND might neuer exchange so good a place where in he found so great content for a wors, it pleased the diuine goodnesse, whose delight and aboade is (as a Gardeners is) amongst Lilys, to transport from the garden of this Seminary vnto the Paradise of heauen, this pure delicat and most fragrant flower, that it might neuer be in danger of being blasted by the pestilent aire of the World or nipped by the could frost of bad example. Of this Angel in flesh I thought myself obliged to speake some part of what I know.

EDMUND POINS fell sick on the 24 of September in the yeare on thousand six hundred sixty seuen, at half an hower after 5 in the morning whilst he was seruing the Common Masse (as they terme it) in the sodality: for the sweet Goodnesse of God woold inuite him to his Celestial Court on a Day, at an Hower, in a Place, and in a function the most beseeming his pious yumour and disposition. The Day was Saterday particularly dedicated to the honour of the Blessed

* MS. wrater [cf. p. 15].

VIRGIN MARY whom our Litle EDMUND did tenderly loue, and confide in her as in his Mother, the hower was between 5 and six in the morning, the ordinary time alotted for our schollers to heer Masse in, which time he so exactly obserued that notwithstanding he was young and as tender as any Child in the house, (p. 4) yet in the sharpest winter he rose out of his bed Constantly with the rest, and not onely woold not of his owne accord, but not euen when it was offered him by the Prefect, he woold not sleep after that time. Yea, he often times vsed to rise at 4 of the Clock, preuenting by an hower the ordinary time. But whether he rose vp with the rest or where vp before, and busy at his book, he disposed his affairs so as to bee frequently the first in the Chappel a pretty while before the Clock struck, expecting the Priest that was to say masse. The Place was the sodality or Chappel of our LADY where the BLESSED SACRAMENT is kept alwais, and is wel furnished with pretious Relicques of SAINTS, in which place Passer inuenit sibi domum et Turtur nidum sibi: 'the Sparow found a lodge and the Turtur a nest.' This spirituall sparow was continually sweetly Chirping at his deuotions, and this litle Turtle-doue was solitaryly retired into a priuat Corner, mourning interiourly for the desire he had to bee vnited with God. And veryly you could neuer find him long* to gether absent from this place, when the Order and Discipline of the house obliged him not to be otherwais imployed; in fine for his function and exercise; at that time he was seruing Masse, which he yused to performe with such Contentment, alacrity and spiritual ioy, with such sweet, humble, and vnaffected modesty and deuotion, that there was nothing (p. 5) more gratefull vnto him then to serue Masse, nor any more welcome to the Priest he serued, nor in fine did Domesticques or Externes meet with any more welcome or better spectacle, and more propper to delight edify and excite them to deuotion during these holy Ceremonies then when they beheld this pious Angel seruing holy Masse. Whilst then as I saied at this time and in this Place EDMUND was deuoutly assisting the Priest, our Lord sent his messenger to him, which was a suddaine and sharp sicknesse, for to inuite him to the Kingdome of heauen, there to giue his maiesty thanks for his vnspeacable goodnesse and mercy to him, and to offer vnto him a perpetuall sacrifice of prayses. The sweet Child seazed vppon by a violent Feuer, fainted and became so weake that he was to be caried by his Companions from the Alter to the Infirmary. That day and the next following, which was sonday, he endured very great paine, hauing a Continuall Feuer, which notwithstanding on Sonday in the Euening began to relent, and a flux followed, which was troublesom to him that night, but on munday in the morning he was without a feuer, and the Doctour thought him out of danger, which exceedingly reioiced vs all, who had seen him the day before. In the afternoone he had a Could fitt, but wee apprehended his distemper woold prooue no wors then a Tertian or quartan ague. But the burning feuer returned and was as violent as euer, affording him no rest or quiet all the night; (p. 6) And towards morning it was iudged absolutely necessary to prepare him to death, [and] arme him with the last Sacraments of the Church. He was perfectly present to himselfe, and had the liberty of his tongue for holy Confession, but became speechlesse soone after: so that though the B. SACRAMENT where brought thither and he shewed great signes of reuerence and deuotion vnto it, wee durst not giue him the holy viaticum, he being so farre spent, and excessiuely disquieted by the vehement pains of his approaching death. Wee apprehended him to be besides himself, and therefore held his hands whilst the holy sacrament of extreme vnction was administred to him, yet it was not necessary, for as soone as those sacred Ceremonies were begun he Composed himself, and held the same decent posture vntill all was ended, lying as quietly as a gentle sweet Lamb. He was admitted into the sodality of our B: LADY, the day before when he was fully capable to vnderstand that great happinesse, for vnlesse it where in this extremity he must haue expected yet some Months for that blessing, by reason of the schoole he was in, for he was newly entered into grammer. His ioy to see himself a Sodalis which he had long desired, and patiently expected, was singular great, though I cannot tell whether the whole body of the sodality did not reioice euen more than he, for hauing this occasion (confiding that he woold recouer of his sicknesse) to adopt so worthy a member (p. 7) and enrich their Congregation with so precious a Brother, so Constant and assiduous a worshipper of the Saints, Patrons, and Protectours of the Sodality, so dear a Child and Client of their Queen and Mother, and so great a Seruant of the diuine Maiestie; he was also admitted into the Societie of JESUS if so be he where capable of it by his age, as himself thought he was, although his Brother and wee do much doubt it, for our Reuerend Father Rector had this power to admitt in and pro articulo mortis, in and for the howre of death those of this Colledge y^t do desire this fauour, as our Litle EDMUND had proposed his most earnest desire of it about a yeare before, but what soeuer was his age, I persuade my selfe that wee shall meet him in heauen a Jesuit in sinu SANCTI IGNATIJ, in the bosom of S^T IGNATIOUS, in testimony and proof whereof our Lord caled him vnto him on the 27 of September the feast of S^T COSMAS AND DAMIAN, which is the anniuersary day of the Confirmation of the Society, and as it where its birth day, and that early in the morning about a quarter after 4 of the Clock, that he might begin his eternall blisse with that ioyfull solemnity; for the innocency of his life makes it probable that he had no purgatory or a very short one. And who can question but that he is one of those of whome it is written Beati qui habitant in domo tua Domine, in sæcula sæculorum laudabunt te. 'Blessed are they O Lord who dwell in thy house, for euer and euer shall they praise thee.' (p. 8) Seing the time he seiourned in this life, his principall studdy was to performe what our Lord tells vs he doeth principally require of man, Solicitum ambulare cum DEO suo, 'to be solicitous and carefull to walke with his GOD.' He behaued himself to our Lord GOD as a dutifull Child to his dearest Father, minding what his will and pleasure was, seeking in all things to Content him, and standing in great awe of giuing him the least offence; for the purity of his haert was so rare and singular, which made him to detest omnem speciem mali, 'al signe and appearance of sin or euil.' I heard on say, he wondered what this Child could say or find to accuse him selfe of in holy Confession, so irreprehensible was his demeaner, and this was one that from morning to night did ouersee all his actions. But this seruant of God litle Contenting himself with what is commendable in the eys of men, entred deeply into his haert for to serch wat was displeasing him, and what pleasing, whose fauour and commendation he onely sought for. Wherefore before confession, which he frequented on the Eeue of euery festiual day almost through out the year, he retired himself into the quietest place of the Chappell where for aboue half an hower he examined his Consciens with so serious attention and application as if he had been euery time preparing to make a generall Confession of al his life; of this practis not onely (p. 9) some of the most mature, and deuout schollers tooke notice, acknowledging that they where confounded by his example, but also a Father, who was not his Confessarious but had his Confession seat ouer against the place where this litle Angel was kneeling, was wont to obserue it, and speake of it, much admiring to see that recollection, and so staid, and attentiue application in a litle boy; and said of him that he did sweetly force ALMIGHTY GOD to attend to him, and graunt him his request. And yet, though he spent so much time in examining his consciens, he was not the least scrupulous nor long at Confession; for in a cleere light discouered he the least stains of his soule, and cleerely explicated what he had to say. This purity of consciens made him to be very wary in his words, as well for to giue noe boddy any offense, as also for feare of speaking a material ly. When he was asked any question he woold stay some litle while, and pause, before he woold answer. It was very rare to heere him positiuely affirme, or deny any thing, but his words where 'I thinke so': 'I hope I shall doe so,' and the Like. A Companion of his offered him once some sweet meats; EDMUND being resolued to deny himself that litle pleasure, desiered to be excused, and said plainely he woold not take them, but his Companion pressed him stil, and requested him for GODS sake to accept of them: neuer appeared more (p. 10) euidently the fear this Child had of GOD, for he was in a strange perplexity, and trouble of minde, not knowing how to come of without displeasing him: for to accept of that offer he durst not for feare of telling a ly, hauing absolutely said he woold not accept them, and yet to refuse it he made a real scrouple, being desiered to admitt of that small present for the loue of GOD, which was a motiue to his louing haert sufficient to make him ron through fier and water. The conclusion was he besought his Companion to vrge him no more.

From the desire he had of contenting, and fear of euer displeasing the diuine maiestie sprong that exactnesse and punctuality in domesticall discipline and order, which euery one admired in him, for though he was but a child scars past twelue years ould when he came to the Coledge, and died within two years and a half, and wanted not life and vigour at his play, and in other occasions, yet neither his Prefects, Maisters or others vnder whose charge he was, found reason in any place of the Colledge, or at any time to reprehend or chide him for any immodesty, lightnesse, childishnesse, breache of rule, or any disobedience.

What was said to him by whay of aduice or councell by those that had care of him to direct him in his studdies or other duties was to him a precept and command; so (p. 11) that those who where best acquainted with his disposition where very wary what, and in what termes they spoke vnto him, for feare of putting a burthen or obligation on that franck and free minde, alwais reddy at a word or signe, to obey whatsoeuer employment he was caled to by either the bell or voice of his superiour.

He went cheerfully, modestly, and speedyly and applyed himself to his pressent duty, litle minding what his companions whoold either say or do. He was obserued sometimes to rise vp at the first toule of the bell, and when he perceiued afterwards that the signe was not giuen to call him away (for that litle boys, either by chaunce, or out of childishnesse, are pulling sometimes at the bell rope), to returne againe with great peace, and quiet to his deuotions, as if he had not been interrupted, whereby appears as well his great punctuality in obeying at the least signe, as also his deuotion in not loosing a moment of that time which was permitted him to spend in prayer, where as most of his companions where already gon out of the Church. He was neuer heard to speake an vnnecessary word in times and places silence was exacted of him. And in real truth, considering his exteriour cariadge, and knowing the interiour of his soule, I am persuaded he woold haue suffered Martyrdome, if occasion had been offered, rather than voluntaryly haue transgressed any one rule, or order of the house. I know that in the refectory particularly some of his Companions (p. 12) not out of malice, or ill will to him, but out of a childissh frolick woold often solicit and prouocque him to speak, and to remitt some what of his angelicall grauity and modesty; but he continued still to be the same, and with much meekenesse bore patiently, and seemed not to minde their impertinency. One thing he was much troubled at, that sometimes with apish gesturs, they forced from him a smile or litle laughter against his will. Wherefore vntill he was disabused of his innocent error, he had a scruple as if he had offended much against modesty. This last somer which was also the last of his life, it being thought vnhoulsome during the heats for our schollers to ly many together in the dormitorys, it was agreed vppon that some of them shoold lodge in the refuge belonging to our Fathers at Watten. The lot fell vppon that schoole in which EDMUND was in, and it was a diuertisement gratefull to litle children to go in the euening to the Refuge, and returne to the Colledge in the morning, their Master accompanijng them. Here although the behauiour of them was such as those Fathers of Watten that resided there where wonderfully edified and well satisfied with them, yet the great silence which is kept in our Colledge at those howers was not exacted nor indeed could be there expected of them. But this (p. 13) angelical yuth like the Turtle, qui semper idem canit, quia semper idem amat, 'hath alwais the same note, becaus it keeps alwais the same loue,' thought that in the obseruance of holy rules there ought to be no difference, and kept silence with ye same rigour at the Refuge, as at the Colledge. This their night aboad lasted about a month, during which time EDMUND constantly went in ye euening and returned in the morning with the same grauity and modesty as if he had walked in a holy procession: as soone as he came to the Refuge he went immediatly to the chappell, and there expected the saijng of Litanies of the Saints, which being ended he retired into his chamber and putting himself pressently vppon his knees by his bed side, continued so long at his prayer, that he had iust time enough to be in bed at 9 of the clocke, after which none was to be vpp. In the morning he rose vp early, and praied half an hower before his companions raised, and this practis he kept all that while, to the great admiration of his Master, who obserued, and eyed constantly his actions.

His fidelity and punctuality was no lesse remarcable, as may appeare by this. A certaine Father once recommended to EDMUND and his Brother George, the care of filling two holy Water potts, by which, a continuall presse of a numerous family passing to and fro euery (p. 14) one sprinckling himself, though they where often filled yet they were frequently dry and empty. The Pot George had care of is very litle and emptyed almost twice a day. Edmunds was somewhat larger, but farther distant from the place where he was to fetch his holy water. Now from the time they where willed to take this care vppon them till EDMUNDS most happy death, which wants not much of 2 years, I do not think there has been one day, wherein at what soeuer hower you had come, you woold not haue found both pots full almost; and when they chanced at any time to be sick or otherwise employed, they recommended to some freind to supply that duty for them; or one Brother performed it for an other, which argues a strange goodnesse and fidelity in these two Angels; and which many wondred at, they where so dexterous in watching their opportunity to bring holy water when none or few where there pressent, that although they did this euery day and sometimes more then once, you woold hardly euer meet them doing it. EDMUND tooke his charge vppon him for his Mothers sake, for the good of her soule departed, and thought he afforded her some comfort and ease (in case she where in purgatory) as often as he carried holy water to that pot; and [he] was obserued when he thought himself to be alone in the sodality to sprinkle also water vppon the grauestones of those that are buried there.

(p. 15) This most sweet childe was solidly vertuous; He was truely mortified, humble, Obedient, patient and meeke. It happened once that as he was playing at trap ball in the Guarden, one of his companions much against his will struck the ball full vppon his ey, the pain certainly was most intense, and woold haue drawn some whord of indignation, or impatience, from an vnmortified and impatient man. But this sweet Lamb immediatly pronounces JESUS, DEO GRATIAS, and for to show he was not in the least offended at him, by whose hand the sad chance happened; looked vppon him presently with a most lovely, and gratious ey, knowing that he stood more in need of comfort then him selfe. And indeed he did more resent his trouble then his owne smaert paine, and as soone as conuiniently he coold said a paire of beads for him. With the same or wrather greater meeknesse did he put vpp and dissemble other things, which he suffered as wee shall see afterwards. He had a horrour of the least faults, and a desire of the sharpest penalties. He chanced to come one day some what after his companions where setled to studdies, and the Prefect though he doubted not but that he had a laughfull excuse; yet for to try him for the example of others, with a graue and seuere countenance chid him for coming late, vnto whom he mildly replyed pray Father pennance me for my fault, and that he spoake it from his haert appears by that which he did another time; for of his owne accord (p. 16) he went to the Prefects chamber and desired him to strike him five times ouer the hand with a rod, that he might suffer sometimes for the souls in purgatory: a Pennance which I am confident woold neuer haue come into any mans head to impose vppon him, although he shoold now and then haue been ouerseen in his duty, being so obedient and tractable as he was; and yet this tender child desirous to gather vp some leaues of the holy Crosse, and to communicat with our Sauiour in his passion persuaded the Prefect to correct him. True it is that whilst he was in litle figures, once bye mistake he was in danger of vndergoing the same pennalty, wherein for that his vertue did much appear, Ile sett it down as it is recounted by his owne schoole fellows, who do speake of it with great admiration. The Master vsed to give ye schollers a certaine exercise profitable indeed for them, but distastfull and tedious vnto those litle boys. He gaue it them out of a greek book which he willed them to bring to schoole, though none of them woold bring it but EDMUND, who was most punctually obedient to his Masters orders; and although he suffred no litle persecution from his companions for it, who sometimes laughed at him, sometimes shewed themselues angry with him and threatned him, yet he constantly performed his duty, obeyed his Maister, and brought the book to schoole. One day some of those litle ones agreed amongst themselues secretly to take away the book from him and hide it, as they did: such like (p. 17) passages wee reed in Surius in the liues of Saints; for not onely holy men suffer persecution by holy men, but also vertuous children from companions of their age. Then the master at lenght cals vppon EDMUND for the book, who answered he had brought it with him to schoole, but that now it was gon, and knew not [what] was become of it, the master taking this to be but an excuse, spoke seuerely vnto him, and tould him that vnlesse he gaue him the book out of hand he was to expect a pennance. The good child fell a weeping and protested he knew not where it was; in fine the Master bids him go forth to the Prefect whose office it is to correct ye children. The innocent sweet child obeys forthwith, but as he was going forth, his companions who neuer wished him so much harme, rise vp and declare his Innocency to their Master, and bring forth the book; so that EDMUND was cleared; though he woold not for all this absolue himself. For thinking it to be his fault that his Master had showed himself offended with him, after schools, when all the schollers almost where mett to gether in their Masters chamber, he comes in, and before them all, faling vppon his knees, with many tears asketh forgiuenesse of his Master, for hauing putt him to trouble; which argues profound humility to aske pardon when he had deserued praise for his heroicall obedience.

(p. 18) Some time before his death he was mooued to mortify himself, and he yused of his owne accord some rigorous afflictions for the souls in Purgatory, which his ghostly Father forbad him to vse any more. He was walking once with a vertuous companion on saterday in the evening, and vppon occasion of churries which they had had at supper, he said it was to sweet and delicious a fruit to be eaten vppon the Eeue of a Communion day. He tould an other companion that yused to cary aples in his pocket as he went abroad, and gaue him part of them, that he woold beare him company no more, if he gaue not ouer to proffer him apples. One woold ons haue bought of him the Place he had, as they call it, in the line for to play at ball (a bargain very vsuall amongst children) for sugar plums. EDMUND presently offers him his place but could not be persuaded to accept of the sweet pressent.

For about [a] yeare he abstained from drinking in the afternoone, no litle mortification for a litle boy, and if at any time he went to drinke with the rest it was by obedience, in which vertue he was most eminent.

He had a great desire to rise in the morning at 4 of the clocke, for to gaine time both to pray and studdie, and he did rise for a great while; but being willed by his prefect to giue it ouer, and sleep till fiue, he obeyed him presently.

He was not onely wonderfully exact and obedient (p. 19) in collegial discipline, but also very zealous and industrious to aduance it in his companions. Hence he woold take an innocent liberty to warne of their duty euen those aboue him both in their school and age; which ordinaryly was taken well at his hands. One day as the schollers weare all abroad and very eager at their play, their Prefect perceiuing it was likely to raine, gaue a signe for them to giue ouer their sport, and returne home before the ordinary time, whereat many grumbled, and muttered very much, and vsed some vnbeseeming and disrespectfull words: but litle EDMUND sweetly and calmly excused and iustified the proceedings of his superiour, and when in requitall of his charity, he receiued from some of them very peeuish, and biting tants, bore them most patiently and meekly, which was a strange check vnto some of these companions, and made them to enter into themselues. There where some schoole fellows of his, vnruly and immodest boys, who knowing his zeale and the desire he had of their good, when they perceiued him to haue some curious picture, some handsome [illegible] and the like, woold come vnto him, and promise to become [illegible], and obseruant of their duty, if he woold giue them [illegible]: which the sweet child woold do most freely, and [illegible] it and all he had to be well spent if thereby he [illegible] become better. And (p. 20) this he did to [illegible] then himself, though they had also deceiued him before, and not stood to their promise. When he came first to the house he had many good things of that nature giuen him, and of most of them, he disposed in this manner. Some other things he lent to his companions that desired to borrow them, and when they forgott to restore them, he lett them alone and neuer demaunded them againe.

His Master obserued, and admired that on Composition days, as wee terme them, when our schollers compound and make themes for places in their school, which in figures are very frequent, he neuer complained of the lenght or difficulties of the themes, neuer was troubled when he could not find words he sought for in the dixionary, or when he was so pressed and straitened for time y^t he could not finish, reuieu, or correct his composition before it was to be giuen vp, though it appeared by the inflammation of his countenance that he laboured at it as much as any one of the most eager of his companions, but he boare it all sweetly, and calmely, and when the Master thought fit to call for the themes, he gaue vp his immediatly as it was, not houlding back, or demanding longer time to correct or alter what occurred vnto him, for which small and litle things in appearance, how solid and grounded vertue is required (especially for to hould the same tenour in (p. 21) them constantly) they know best who are acquainted with the yumour of schollers, especially of litle boys in such occasions.

The like vertue he showed when he was put vppon the explication of a haerd book, a greek Author hauing neither Lexicon nor Radices Linguæ græcæ, books very necessary for that enterprise; and yet all this last vacation from schools, was this obedient child with vnfatigable labour, and yet with wonderfull calmnesse and quiet of minde, plodding vppon such a book and hewing as I may say a rock. Those whom now and then he addressed himself vnto for help, did admire him, and some of his owne schoole, litle boys seeing his patience and constant perseuerance, where in a manner amazed at it, and confessed they should haue cast the book quite away, had they been in his case. But its hardly credible how our Lord did blesse his Labours aboue his owne and others expectations, for he gaue a wonderfull good account of his profit by interpreting Dauids Psalter out of greek into Lattin and answering to hard and intrecat questions publickly in our Refectory euen the first week he was in gramer, I meane some Psalmes of the Psalter; and when he fell sick which was soone after he had prepared himself in thirty Psalmes by his priuat diligence, besides his schoole dutys: which seemed not a litle strange to those that knew him. The innocency of his life, did sharpen his vnderstanding; his prayer for the whole community (p. 22) drew light from Heauen, and his obedience merited him particular assistance of ALMIGHTY GOD.

Nor could sicknesse alter the constant temper and harmonious temper of his vertuose soule, for he excepted all paine and siknesse gratefully from the fatherly hand of GOD, and bare it quietly and patiently, permitting himself to be ruled by those who attended him, and submitting to seueral things much against his inclinations. He had a very weak stomack and could not, though he forsed himself, eate certaine meats which he saw probably woold be offered him wilst he was sick, he demaunded of his ghostly father how he was to behaue himself if such motiues shoold be pressented to him. He woold say sometimes to the Infirmarian, that was most carefully attending him, that he had nothing where with to requite his charity besides his prayers, which he woold offer vp vnto Almighty GOD for him. In his last, short indeed, but sharp sickenesse, he had a minde to gett out of his bed, and was preparing for it hoping to find some ease by sitting vp. But as the Infirmarian perceiued he was offering to rise, he tould him t'was better to Lay still; whereuppon he cast downe his litle armes vppon the bead and resting his head said GODS WILL BE DON and neuer offered more to rise. In the same diseas he said to some that where (p. 23) sitting by him, and took great compassion of him in those his excessiue paines: IF I KANNOT ENDURE THIS PAINE, HOW SHALL I SUFFER THE TORMENTS OF PURGATORY. 2 things afflicted him in this sicknesse, the one that he could not pray, the other that he thought he wanted patience, and was troublesome to the good religious Brother, that with charity assisted him, whereas notwithstanding his most sweet and calme patiens did wonderfully edify those that saw him, but becaus through the vehemency of his paine, he was forced often to turne himself from one side to the other, he often accused himself to those that where by of impatience. It is a comfort heere to reflect vppon the vniformity of EDMUND with his Brother George, as before in health, so now in sicknesse. For when George a yeare and a half before this, lay sick of a violent feuer, his Ghostly Father comming to see him perceiued him to be saying his beads, which he held quietly in his hands vnder the bead-cloaths, and wondered that being in that case he woold pray vocally, and continue his accustomed deuotions, and the child complained that for the weaknesse of his head and importunity of troublesome fancys, he was almost half an houre in reciting one decade of his rosary. An other time his ghostly Father finding him to be in excessiue torment, caused by a paine in his side, besides his feuer; said vnto him, George, you do beare this patiently (p. 24) for almighty Gods sake. To whom he replyed with tears. No indeed Father do I not. I woold faine be patient, but the pain is so great that it wil not permitt me to be soe. And yet there he lay quiet, patient, resigned—like an Angel.

Vertue in children for the most paert is like to a Primerose in the spring, sweet, and louely, but so soft and tender that a morning frost nipps it and kils it. Many children are deuout, modest, dilligent, obedient whilst they are cherished with the warme sunshine of fauour and vogue with their companions; but if they chance to be persecuted for doing well, then their vertue can not with stand this bront; it is gon. Litle EDMUND was no such fading flower, he was wrather one of those sollid and happy trees vnto which the spirit of GOD compares a iust man, which keep their verdure no lesse in a rough winter then in a pleasant sommer. It is an article of Faith declared by the Apostle that all who will liue vertuously in JESUS CHRIST shall suffer persecution! And this vertuous child suffered in paert, though he liued amongst Saincts. Yet no body can frame a true conceit of what he suffered, that doeth not know the sweetnesse of his yumour and disposition. In all the days of my life I do not remember to haue mett with one that was more wary, and had a greater feare of offending and displeasing any christian creature, then had this child. For (p. 25) if he did perceiue any one of his companions or whomsoeuer els to be disgusted and discontented with him, though he could not discouer any cause giuen on his paert, it was like a poniard driuen into his breast, which made his haert to bleed (the like is recorded of St Bernard, as I take it, in his youth) and he could find no rest vntil, discouering his grief vnto his Ghostly Father, he was assured by him he had no cause to bee troubled. But when he saw that for doing his duty, any body did take offense, and was displeased with him, onely GOD knows the affliction of that tender haert, to see him self the occasion of his companions grief and discontent. And yet notwithstanding so deep a resentment, he woold haue quite broaken of with the most deare freind he had, rather then haue broaken any rule of the house, for to comply with him; as for example, to talke with them when silence was to be obserued. Our Lord permitted him for his greater meritt to haue a hard and long triall in this kind. A certaine yuth of a harsh and crabbed nature, quite different from EDMUNDS sweet temper, had a great desire to be insinuatly familiar with him, and requested one that had great power with EDMUND to speake vnto him in his behalf. That meek Lamb was content to please any boddy, though I thinke he did not a litle mortify himself to keep him company, whose conditions where so rough. It happened (p. 26) not long after that they satt to gether in the studdy place this companion desirous to be a scholler, and yet some what dull, requested EDMUND with great earnestnesse to help him, which he did with singular charity at those times in which it is permitted to confer one with an other. But he, not satisfied with this, was still asking questions and proposing his doubts, euen at those times when all are to be quiet and to attend vnto them selues without speaking to any of their companions. EDMUND who had rather a died then haue broaken the rule of silence took occasion sweetly to admonish him not to be troublesome at those times, as for other times when it was permitted he was reddy to serue him; notwithstanding this, that companion gaue not ouer to importune him to answer his questions and solue his doubts. And EDMUND obliged himself inuiolably to obserue the rule of silence and not to answer so much as one word. Herevppon that churl became spightish and furious, changing all his former affection into spleen and malice and persecuted that litle Angell his benefactour, more outragiously then a man could beleeue. He striued to hinder him in his studdies, forged of him foolish storys and teals, and threatned to make him infamous amongst his companions, all which insolencys that harmelesse Doue void of gall dissembled and suffered with great Patience and meeknesse making his mone onely to ALMIGHTY GOD (p. 27) that knew the affliction of his haert and acquainting his ghostly Father with it not by way of complaint but to aske his direction how he shoold carry himself in this affaire, for he desired him neither to rebuke him for it nor to speake to the Prefect that had care of the studdy place for to keep him in his duty. And whereas in manifesting his other troubles he vsed to speake dolefully now when he was speaking of this his persecution he shewed as well in his speech as countenance much cheerfulnesse and alacrity as if he had been glad of so faire an occasion offered him for to suffer something for the loue of our Lord. This storme was not blowne ouer in few days but continued a long while, and I do think that sweet EDMUND [n]euer opened his lips about it to any of his companions, vnlesse it where once to his Brother, who first of his owne accord had taken notice of that lads impertinent behauiour towards him, and euen from his Brother he concealed a great paert of what he suffered.

Yet there was none more fit for him to consult with all in such troubles, then his Brother, not onely for the neare coniunction of flesh and blood, but also for that they had been partakers together before in bearing with rude and vnciuil Persons; for at their first coming to the house, being of an actiue and vigorous spiritt and very dexterous and skilfull in playing at ball, where glad to play in their turnes amongst their companions, and it happened sometimes (p. 28) when they had gotten a place and weare reddy to begin the game, that some bould vnmanerly boy (for in a great community the prouidence of Almighty GOD euer permitts that there be some for to exercise the vertue and patience of the good) woold come to dispute the place and chalenge it as his owne, and their answer was with much meekenesse indeed i thought it was my place, but seing you say its yours, you shall haue it. And thus they yeelded vp their right, vnlesse others that where by and knew the equity of their cause, did controle the sacy and impudent companion. A worthy Personage that yused to be in the guarden whilst the schollers where there playing, sometimes obserued this, and often spoake of it with great admiration and edification.

But notwithstanding such encounters, which he met with sometimes from certaine crosse companions, he was generally and vniuersally loued by all, and his sweet innocent company was very much desired. The grauer sort of schollers where glad to be with him, for that they vnderstood his worth, and expected no small blessings of our Lord by conuersing with a litle Sainct, whose soule they knew to be most precious in his maiestys sight. His equals and schoolefellows that were vertuously giuen, took him for their patterne and mirrhor, and profitted very much by his company and discours. And euen many of the least obseruant (p. 29) took delight to be with him; and he was redy for all, but woold sweetly warne such as these y^t vnlesse they became more deuout and modest and obedient vnto superiours he woold forbear to be their companion. A certain youth vertuous and of good example in his owne schoole loued him most deerly, and had a mind to keep recreation in a manner alwais with him; litle EDMUND liked also his company very well, for their discours was neauer but innocent, and pious, but hearing it was not so sutable to the custome of the house to consort himself so often with the same Person in time allotted for recreation, he freindly and freely desired him not to be vrgent to haue him so often for his companion.

It was much that a litle boy of a most sweet disposition, gratious and good paerts vniuersally beloued and esteemed by all, yet was not fondly affected by any one; for the loue which all did beare him was euer with a respect and reuerence. Neither was he forward to insinuat himself into any mans affection, though out of true vertue he sought to content all. Our Lord seemed to be zealous of that purest soule, and took him away to himself when those talents, which migh[t] commend him more to the vogue and esteeme of men and consequently cause a lesse refind and spirituall affection, began to open and display themselfs, which hitherto for his age and loughnesse of his scool had (p. 30) not much appeared in him; he began now to be looked on as the grace of the stage in acting. He was pretty forward for interpreting Greek authours and in all probabi[li]ty woold haue prooued a good disputant, for he had a pretty witt, and excellent iudgement, a cleare vterance and spoak lattin well for one of that scoole; and these are the Paerts that do most sett forth a youth especially of his age and bignesse in our seminary. But who knowes but y^t with this exteriour lustre his inward lightnesse might bee obscured. For it commonly happens that the more one shines before the world, the more dimb and dull is the light which he casteth to heauen. This did our Lord preuent by taking away EDMUND to himself when he had newly entered in Grammer scoole; nor wood he expose so rich and radient a perle to be by prases of men sullied, which hitherto he had charily concealed and kept close from the eys and knowledge of him who had most right vnto it. My meaning is that this vertuous child did not know his owne worth, and litle thought there was anything extraordinary in him, much lesse that such treasurs weare confined to his soule; yea frequently when he merited most and did heroicall acts for the loue of God, he looked vppon himself in a manner as lost.

It is worthy [of] consideration (for to prays our Lord GOD in his mercys) how close his diuine Maiesty held this (p. 31) child by him, how he took him by the hand, and drew him after him in the strait and narrow path, according to the saying of the Royall profett: Adhæsit anima mea post te, me suscepit dextera tua; 'my soule hath clouen to thee, and thy right hand taken me': and againe deduxit me super semitas Justitiæ propter nomen suum, 'he hath led me through the paths of Justice to glorify his name.' And how he hedged in his way with thornes when there was danger for him to stepp aside, as he promises to do with his elect by the mouth of an other prophet. A vertuous youth rons great hazard of relenting his feruour whilst he is in the infirmary, if he [be] but lightly sick and has noe great paine to quicken his spirit and put him in mind of GOD. For the liberty and indulgence graunted to that place, of laying long in bed, of sitting all the day by the fire side, of talking, playing, disporting and the like, makes him soone forgett his duty, to neglect his accustomed deuotions and to loose in the space of a few days what he had gained in many weeks, and perhaps will not recouer in twice as many. Our Litle

EDMUND might well haue ron this danger as being confined to ye Infirmary for a long time, not by any ague or such like sharpe disease but by reason of a cathar or defluxion which faling vppon his stomack held him in a weake condition, yet so that he might talke play or (p. 32) go about, and entertaine himself meryly as he pleased; but our blessed Lord euer carefull to maintaine and conserue what he had already wrought in that choise vessel of his grace, held him so strictly to his duty that perhaps in that dangerous place and time, he in vertue profitted, and aduanced his merit to a higher pitch then without that occasion he woold haue arriued to in many a yeare. He permitted the diuel to trouble and disquiet his minde with scruples and strange fears anxietys and such thoughts that he neuer experienced the like in all his life time either before or after. What shoold this pure and faithfull haert do in this occasion? he feared more the offence of GOD then all the diuels of hell, though they shoold haue appeared in their most hidious shapes, and yet which way so euer he turned himself he stood as he thought vppon the very brim of that dismal pitt and sometimes doubted whether he weare not already falen into it. He pressently retired into solitude seperated himself from company came not where the fier was and spent the greatest part of the day alone in the chappel, or (when he was wearied out with ouer long kneeling) at his bed side drawing the curtains vppon him for to be solitary. Heere he praied, wept, examined and serched euery corner of his mind, commended himself vnto his Patrons caled without intermission vppon almighty GOD, in a word he might well haue said with dolefull Jeremie: (p. 33) non sedi in concilio Ludentium, solus sedebam quoniam comminatione replesti me; quare factus est dolor meus perpetuus, et plaga mea desperabilis renuit curari. 'I absent myself from those who laugh and play, and sitt heere solitary alone because you haue filled me with terrours and threats of your Judgement. How comes it that my sorrow endures so long and that this woond of mine in a manner is desperat and kan find no cure.' In the meane while the good Brother that had care of the sick, and dearely loued this child for his vertue, apprehending that some of his companions had contristated him, coms vnto him and sweetly cherishing him desires him to go sit by the fier and to be mery with the rest in the Infirmery; to whom he answers, that he could take no comfort being extremely afflicted in minde, vntill his ghostly Father were caled vnto him. But whether his ghostly Father where then from home, or otherwise employed, there passed some days, If I bee not mistaken, before he knew any thing of the childs trouble or affliction: and comming vnto him at lenght found him in that sad condition that it greiued him to the very haert. He looked like one frighted and scared; you woold haue thought you had seen a little bird vnder a boosh panting and trembling, and eying the Kite that was houering about expecting for to catch it. So strange a horrour had that (p. 34) innocent soule of the least shaddow of sin. After this (as he was most obedient) he cheered vpp, grew more confident and entertained himself more familiarly with his companions, and yet during the whole time of his aboade in the Infirmary a great paert of the same trouble remained, which he sought to allay by frequent prayer, wherein he was so assiduous that he spent more time at his deuotions then could haue been permitted him had he bin well and out of the Infirmary. Thus did our mercifull Lord, that by the intermission of his ordinary and domesticall exercises he shoold come to suffer no losse or detriment in spirit and deuotion.

It was no lesse a mercy of GOD and more continuall, which made that become most bitter and ircksome vnto him which ordinaryly is vnto children and men also one of the sweetest contentments of the world, to witt the merry and free company of those that are alwais iesting for to cause sport and laughter, which as great S^T BASIL obserues doth quite dissolue the vigour of the soule and much interrupt the communication it hath with GOD, but the difficulty which litle EDMUND had therein, as it proceeded from a most candid sincerity, so it was a great incitement vnto him for to be in a manner continually praying. This sweet child, as he had a horrour and detestation of lying, so could he not easyly persuade him self that any woold euer tell (p. 35) him a ly, and therefore whatsoeuer was said vnto him, he took it as spoaken in sincerity. And as for mendacium iocosum, 'a ly tould in iest' hee did not know what it ment of wch sort of ly S: AUGUSTIN says thus. In quo non magna culpa est, tamen non est sine culpa. Mendacium in iocando ideo non est perniciosissimum, quia non fallit, nouit enim ille cui dicitur, ioci causa esse dictum. 'There is no great fault in it, yet is it not without fault. A Ly spoken in iest is not extreamly pernicious, because it doth not deceiue; for he to whom it is spoaken knows it to be spoken in iest.' But his innocency vnderstood not this; which caused him often great troubles; wherein our B^d Lord who intended in a short time to perfect his happy soule, had 2 great designes the one was to afford him matter of meritt by exercising his patience and meekenesse; for heering diuers things most improbable, said of him by his companions (as with children it sometimes happens), and not knowing that they iested with him but thinking such was the opinion they had of him, he woold not stand to iustifie himselfe, nor to contest with them, but quietly dissembled his grief by houlding his peace, though it stung him to the very haert. To heere him sometimes in confidence lay open these his troubles (which he did now and then to his Ghostly Father) woold make anyone embrace and loue his sincerity and candor, tenderly resent his afflictions, and admire his vertue in bearing them, (p. 36) and yet to blesse himself to see his innocent mistakes. This his patient dissembling was in things that concerned himself; for when he thought GODS honour to be engaged, it was strange y^t a litle child shoold show so great zeale. A companion once let fall some words which signified that wrather then he woold loose all his means, and become a beggar, he woold temporise and go to church with hereticks. This was a to edged sword in EDMUNDS haert and he did so bestir him self to bring his companion to vnderstand the indignity of his saying and the danger he exposed himself to, that he being quite ashamed of his words said he spoak onely in iest, and not onely then endeauoured to persuade EDMUND as much but also at other times came and excused his rash and inconsiderat words. Another time it happened that EDMUND being in the company of 3 or 4 that weare speaking of the pressent warrs, one of them by way of exaggeration said he woold kill himself before he woold come into the hands of the ennemy, for which an other graue yuth pressently rebuked him, but EDMUND burst forth into tears which was a great check vnto him, and a most wholsom admonition as well to those that then saw him as also to all those whom they tould it vnto. The other designe of Almighty GOD was to make all company and conuersation that might haue caused the least blemish to the most singular purity and (p. 37) innocency of his consciens to become bitter and distastfull vnto him, and by this means sweetly to draw or euen to compell him to prayer and communication with his maiesty. For euen as the litle bird seing it self in danger flys vnto its nest; were it fears neither Hawke nor foulers snare, so this sweet bird of Paradise, this mysticall Turtle, finding litle comfort els weare was euer repairing to the sodality where he had his nest Turtur nidum sibi vbi ponat pullos suos: altaria tua Domine virtutum. For heere weare his chast grones, his innocent sighs, his feruent prayers and strong resolutions, and he acknowledged to his Confessarious that our Lord did comfort him in prayer. In the church indeed he prayed not much but it was at those times when all the schollers where to be there, and he was for the most part euer vppon his knees, though holy seruis at certaine times of the yeare lasteth three howers. Insomuch that his prefect did feare he woold endomage his health by so long and intens prayer; and was resolued if he had recouered of his last sicknesse to haue forbidden him to kneele so long together. But his deuotion appeared more in the sodality were his hart and tresor was amongst the relicques of Saints, which like to a crowne or diademe of glory did enuiron our B^d SAUIOUR vppon the Alter, where is verified that which the Prophet sings. DEUS qui glorificatur in consilio sanctorum magnus et terribilis super omnes qui in circuitu sunt 'GOD is glorified in the assembly of Saints, and he appears great and full of maiesty ouer all that are round about him.' In this sodality it is scarce credible how often litle EDMUND was praying when there was no obligation that caled him els were. Vppon holy days, and play days, the schollers haue many howers which they may dispose of as they please. It was a matter of great edification to see how prudently he disposed his time. A litle of it he allotted to play, or to entertaine himself with some companion, the rest he distributed between prayer and studdy; for to pray was vnto him as meat and drink, and yet hardly any one in the Colledge was more studious then he. At his prayers he knelt in a most decent, modest, quiet, sweet posture, without any affectation or ostentation of deuotion. Insomuch that you might haue knelt by him for a good space of time, and scars haue knowne that he was there, if you had not seen him. He had many innocent pious practises that came as sweetly, and naturally from him, as water flows from a fountaine. When he came to his Ghostly Fathers chamber, whatsoeuer his businesse was, in the first place, he alwaies asked him blessing vppon both knees with singular Reuerence, which he obserued also as he went out of his chamber.

As he passed along the galleries he woold kisse the picturs hanging on the walls, which he could reach vnto, (p. 39) and those that are fastned to the doors.

When he was to walke abroade (besides his inuiolable customs of visiting the sodality before he went out and againe as soone as he came home) he yused, if he had a companion that he could be confident with, to say our Ladys Litanies as soone as he was out of the towne; and neuer failed a litle before the signe was giuen for to call them all home to say the said littanies with some other prayers in thanksgiuing that our Lord had preserued him and the rest of his companions from all harme and badd encounter that day abroad, for which purpos he had agreed with one of his schoole fellows for to be redy at a signe, for to come out and walke out with him a litle from the rest, before they where caled home. Noe boddy could look vppon this child with a faithfull ey whilst he was at his deuotions, but he did lodge him in his very haert, and much desire to haue part in those innocent and feruent prayers. Some haue out of a kind of Reuerence vnto him kissed the place, and euen now kisse the ground where his knees were so often and so deuoutly planted in prayer. Wee do very particularly ascribe vnto his holy prayers two most precious and authentical Relicques of the Prime Virgin Martyrs SAINCTE CATHERINE AND S: AGNES, which do now enrich our Sodality, for wilst we were negotiating for them, wee sett him a praying and (p. 40) wee found better successe then by human means could be expected, and we do confide by his intercession to obtain the holy relicque of the incomparable S^T MARTINA which with an impatient desire wee expect from Roome.

Without question it is he who was receiued a most welcome guest to the whole congregation of BLESSED SAINCTS, whom vppon earth as their humble client he had honoured and reuerenced with all dutifull affection and deuotion. The Roman martyrologe he both heard at table, and red priuatly euery day, with much spirituall gust and contentment. Before the solemnitys of his particular Patrons, which were very frequent, he was wont to desire his Freinds, with whom he was most confident, to pray for him and help him for to honour them, promising to do the like for them on their Patrons dayes; his greatest comfort and recreation was to discours with one of his owne humour, of the holy Saints, and particularly of the holy virgins and tender litle children, that adorned their innocency and virginity with an heroical fortitude and constancy in torments suffered for the loue and faith of Christ. These discourses offered his mind a continuall and festiuall banquet and he wel resembled those happy soules of whom wee read where represented in a vision as milke white Lambs feeding in a most sweet and delicious medow vppon the purest Lelys, for he wanted not the innocent (p. 41) candour of a Lamb, and his cleane, generous, and lofty thoughts, which had a horror of a worldly and transitory thought or delight, were euer entertained with the pure sweet alwais flourishing lelies of the mysteries of our SAUIOUR his life, his incomprehensible loue to mankind, the worthy actions and suffrings of his saints and the eternall ioys of heauen.

He bore particular deuotion to the saints of his name, the 2 ST EDMUNDS to wit the King and Martyr, and the Bishop and Confessour, to the Apostle of his country S. PATRICKE, to those whose sacred relicques are kept in the Sodality, and vnto ST PROCOPIUS MARTYR whose feast is on the 8 of July. R. F. Rectour that then was of the Colledge of Liege* sent vnto him and his Brother and cosen some sacred dust of the bones of the holy martyrs ST PRIMUS and FAUSTUS fastened with gome to silke in forme of a crosse. These Relicques they all three receiued as an inestimable treasure with incredible ioy, and got them put and enclosed in syluer crosses with glasses before them for to weare them at their brests. EDMUND highly reuerenced and deerly loued these saints and preferred his reliquary before scepters and crownes of Kings. Since his death his Brother entends to put it about his neck insteed of his owne, the saincts being the same, and this hauing some new veneration added to it by EDMUNDS constant deuotion thereunto. Wherein it is not amisse to obserue that when their relicquaries were first made and brought vnto them EDMUND as being the youngest gaue place vnto his Brother and Cosen contenting himself with what they had left, but now this is far preferred and sought for before the other 2, and happy is he that can haue it.

But of all the saints, next to the QUEENE OF SAINTS, this saintly child did loue, esteem, honour and confide most in ST ENCRATIDES A GLORIUS VIRGIN AND MARTYR otherwise caled ENGRATIA, of whom the Church in the Roman martyrologe speaketh on the 16 of April. The life and martyrdome of this dearest spouse of CHRIST was related vnto him about a yeare and [a] half befor his death, and he was willed to make choise of her for his speciall Patronesse, which he did as obediently as if he had been committed vnto her care and protection by the expresse commendation of our SAUIOUR. From that time he considered ST ENCRATIDES as his Mother, euery day asked her blessing, committed all his affairs to her, and by her offered them vp vnto our B. LADY that she woold vouchsafe to offer them vnto her Sonne. When he was to appeare in any publick exercise, as disputing, interpreting Greek, acting and the like ST ENCRATIDES was most earnestly prayed vnto and desired to prosper his designes. Yet he was more carefull to be gratefull vnto her for the good successe of the businesse when it was ouer then solicitous (p. 43) to obtaine her fauour when he was to sett about it. In euery theme he made, was written in his fairest hand AD MAIOREM DEI DEIPARÆ ET SANCTÆ ENCRATIDIS GLORIAM. In euery place he stood in awfull feare and respect of this good mother persuading himself that she took notice of his behauiour. His Master wondered to see this saints name, who is not much knowne or talked of, in euery theme he brought to schoole, but discoursing once with him about her, he did far more admire the iubily and exultation of haert with which the gratefull child did speake of his deare saint Mother. After which time his Master took now and then occasion to say something in the scoole of that most Louely Saint, and presently litle EDMUNDS countenance became almost seraphical, such rays of a most innocent spiritual ioy and gladnesse did appear and shine therein. Where vppon his Maister for to feed himself and his schollers with a spiritual contentment in his schoole action, wherein he represented the Martyrdome of the two holy children S. JUSTUS AND S^T PASTOR (the Latter wereof litle EDMUND acted most gratiously) the Master took occasion frequently to name SAINT ENCRATIDES, which he might well do, she being of the same country, to witt a Spanish Lady, and hauing suffered in the same Persecution and vnder the same bloody Tyrant with those 2 litle Brothers. And it was a pleasure to obserue the ioy which without affectation redounded into the face of this her most gratefull client, as often as her (p. 44) delightfull name occurred whether himself pronounced it, or heard it from the Mouth of his companions. What fauours ye BLESSED VIRGIN MARTYR SAINT ENCRATIDES returned vnto her dearest pupill, wee shall know when wee come to the place where this sweet child with his good Mother behoulds the face of GOD.

* Father John Stevens, S.J., was succeeded in the rectorate of Liege in October, 1666, by Father Edward Courtney.

It seems not improbable (though I will affirme nothing) that either SAINT ENCRATIDES or some blessed spirit appeared visibly vnto him at his death; for to receiue his thrice happy soule, and present it before the throne of GOD. For not long before he died, as he was lying on his left side, on a suddaine he turned himself on his right side, as if he were casting himself into the embracements of one that was come to receiue him, and this with so much earnestnesse that he had fallen out of his bed, had not he been helped and shoued back by the father that stood by, and yet still he made the same offer, and in fine so died with his armes, head and neck stretched out, and his ey directed to the same place. A man may thinke he was frighted; neither will I gainsay; for almighty GOD doth permitt some of the most innocent Persons to haue at their death hidious and horrid sights (as wel for the encrease of their merit by exercise of hope, and confidence in our deare GOD as also to purify and cleans their souls from that litle drosse which yet remains, and is to be scoured after death in Purgatory if it be not taken away by some great mercy of GOD graunted to certaine choise soules that haue been very exact and faithfull in his holy seruice) to preuent in this manner their purgatory, that going forth of their boddies they may immediatly be admitted amongst the rest of the blessed in heauen. And it is likely enough EDMUND was in this manner prooued, and exercised by some dreadfull sight, represented vnto him on the left side of his bed which made him in a fright turne to the other: yet two things do persuade me that pressently after this vgly sight (if he had any such) he enioyed a comfortable vision of a blessed spirit. For first, if this stretching out of his hands and head had been to flay away and secure himself from y^t dreadfull obiect he woold haue made towards his ghostly Father that stood by his bed, as we saw many of vs to gether some years before a most vertuous youth lying vppon his death bed, who being in this manner affrighted during some howers, turned still towards him that was praying by him, catched hould of his girdle held it fast with both his hands, and sought to shrowd himself into his bosome, being all this while so pressent to himself and so able that he often signed himself with the HOLY CROSSE and both did, and spake, wat was prescribed and councelled: but litle EDMUND made not his addresse vnto the Priest, that was close by him in a very conspicious place, but to some other person inuisible to the Priests eys. Secondly pressently after he had suddainly turned from the left side his countenance which was before troubled and ghastly, became calme and sweet. And in fine that posture and those gesturs did not seeme to be of a Person pursued by an ennemy, but of [a] louing child running to the armes of his mother, who if it (p. 46) where the glorious Virgin S^T ENCRATIDES I shall not wonder, considering his constant duety vnto her not intermitted euen in this his last sicknesse. For he caled amourously vppon her in his sharpest pains assuring himself of her help and protection. And, which aboue all is to be reflected vppon, made choise of her for his Mother and speciall patronesse vppon this confidence that she shoold assist and defend him in his last and most dangerous conflict. But of this, euery man as he thinks. Certain it is that, as his life was most innocent, so was his death most precious.

When and by what means our Lord did first begin to draw him to so great perfection I know not: onely this that it was soone after his coming to our seminary of St Omers, where in the space of 2 years and a half he arriued to an eminent degree of vertue; so much I can say that he and his Brother and also their cosen, (who came hither some while before them, and by the great commendations he gaue of the place was the cause of their coming) where in this all very happy, that pressently at their first arriuall they consorted themselues with vertuous and discreet companions, who by word and example fashioned and framed them (they being all three of an excellent temper) to the loue of order and obseruance, which is of infinite importance to children for their future carriadge. EDMUNDS Ghostly Father vsed to say of him when he was yet liuing and likely to liue, and spoake it more than once or twice to the superiour of the house, that this child was truely and solidly vertuous and that he thought GOD was disposing to take him (p. 47) soone to heauen, or if he entended to haue him stay longer in the world had great designes ouer him.

The night before his death there watched with him two of the grauest students, the one his schoolfellow; the other his Brothers and cosens intimat freind. Towards the morning were caled Father Minister and his ghostly Father and these 4 had occasion to be neare him and touch him, to take his breath and the like (wherein they were lesse wary, for that they apprehended not his disease to be contagious) and one of them, after it was euident what sicknesse he had, staid with him and was pressent when he died, and about a quarter after. And though the yuths that where with him weare fasting and not prouided of human preseruatiue or antidote, yett they litle feared they shoold euer bee the wors for him, as indeed they were not. It happened also that one of our youths, a tender child, came in to the Roome where he died pressently after his boddy was conueyed thence, litle knowing that he was dead, and much lesse suspecting what disease he died of, and yet neuer ailed anything. To say nothing that the day before his death many schollers and others where promiscuously with him, and that the chamber was such where in he died that the contagion might haue been spread from it to the greatest part of our house, as they indeed who carried his boddy away did much feare and suspect. And yet Almighty GOD be euer praised not one Person receiued harme by him, for that innocent Boddy, faithfull partner of a holy soule (though for the common curse laid vppon Adam with all his (p. 48) Posterity, and for his owne greater merit was infected with the Plague) yet deriued not infection to any boddy els; which in the circumstances, place, and time, of his death was very wonderfull, and looked on, as an effect of his prayers and singular merit with GOD ALMIGHTY. And wee are confident wee haue in him a Patron in heauen, who draws many a spirituall and temporall blessing vppon our house, moriatur anima mea morte huius et fiant nouissima mea huius Similia. 'God grant me to dy his happy death, and first to liue his blessed life that so my end may become like his.' Amen.

To the greater honnour of Almighty God,
the euer immaculat Virgin Mary, Saint
Encratides, and her holy Client
Edmund Poins

RECUSANTS OF MASHAM, YORKSHIRE

EXTRACTS ONLY

THE Society is indebted to Mr. Gibbons, of Huntington, York, honorary correspondent, for the transcript taken from the Act Books of the Peculiar Court of Masham. As second hand from a copy, which would seem not altogether correct, it must be taken with its defects and compared with other returns, of which there are, fortunately, several in existence. The Rawlinson MS. B. 452, in the Bodleian Library, printed by Mr. Edward Peacock, F.S.A., entitled "A List of the Roman Catholics in the County of York in 1604," familiarly known as "Peacock's Yorkshire Recusants," contains on pages 73–77 a considerable list of Recusants of Massam (or Masham). The North Riding Record Society has also published a valuable collection of Recusants of that Riding, unfortunately with more variety of indexing than is desirable. The following dates may be mentioned regarding Masham Recusants under the several volumes and pages:—

II: 73, 12 July, 1614; 151, 9 July, 1616; 163, 1 Oct., 1617; 185, 6 Oct., 1618.
III: 85, 10 July, 1612; 123, 2 Oct., 1621; 152, 8 Oct., 1622; 183, 7 Oct., 1823; 217, 5 Oct., 1624; 230, 27 April, 1625; 248, 12 Oct., 1625; 278, 6 Oct., 1626; 301, 3 Oct., 1628; 340, 3 Oct., 1632; 362, 2 Oct., 1633.
IV: 22, 8 Oct., 1634; 42, 30 Sept., 1635; 82, 3 Oct., 1637; 104, 3 Oct., 1638; 123, 2 Oct., 1639; 210, 5 Oct., 1641.

The Civil War followed, and "Papistical Recusants" shared with some of their former persecutors a shorter shrift. When the Commonwealth was established they suffered with other "Delinquents," or more so, for Cromwell's tolerance did not embrace Catholics. Charles II would fain have extended tolerance, had not the lies based on the great fire and the machinations of Titus Oates, and other miscreants, inflamed the mind of the ignorant and fanatical lower classes. Page 195 of volume vi bristles again with Recusants at the Quarter Sessions of 20 Jany., 167⅔, at Richmond; but this is beyond the time of the following extracts made by Mr. Gibbons, which seemed to him to relate to Recusants. It must be clearly understood that other indictments, as for non-payment of assessments and offences against the criminal law, are excluded as beyond the scope of the Catholic Record Society's undertaking.

A special feature in these returns is, that after all the harrying about of Recusants at Quarter Sessions at Helmsley, Malton, Northallerton, Richmond, Stokesley, Thirsk, and special sessions elsewhere, with an occasional summons to the Assizes at York or London, they had their "Peculiar Courts" near at home, to keep up the persecution between times. The Danbys and Wyvills mentioned were the most important families in the parish, having inherited the estate of Thomas, fifth Lord Scrope of Masham, through his second and third daughters, Margaret and Elizabeth, his four sons, Thomas, Henry, Ralph, and Geoffery, who each succeeded him in the barony, having all died without issue. (Burke's Extinct Peerage.) Some members of the lesser gentry appear in the list, but the bulk of the names are of yeomen, husbandmen, weavers or websters, cordwainers or shoemakers, tailors, colliers, &c., and their families. Many of the names are still found in the district. High stationed or lowly, their names constantly recur in the rolls of Recusants.

THREE LETTERS RELATING TO THE TREATMENT OF THE CATHOLIC PRISONERS IN WISBEACH CASTLE, 1615

CONTRIBUTED BY HENRY HOUSTON BALL

Bodleian Library, MS. Ashmole 826, ff. 215, 217, 219.

I. PROTEST OF THE PRISONERS

(f. 215.) Ihs.

All we the Catholick prisoners committed by speciall order from the LL^{s} of his Maties most honourable priuy Counsaile vnto the Castle of Wisbich there to be kept vnder the custody of Mr Taylor the Constable therof according to the directions giuen by their LL^{ps} vnto the sayd Constable, vnfainedly protest that we are willing in all respectiue duty to submitt ourselues to their LL^{ps} direction, so far forth as may stand wth the safeguard of our liues, immunity of our consciences, and safety of our frendes: but hauing diligently considered of the vnvsuall seuerity and rigorous strictnes of many of the proposed articles wth one consent we all conclude that they are morally impossible of vs to be obserued wthout ye manifest danger of our liues, and vtter ruine and decay both of our frends our healths and fortunes: For that our small meanes being already exhausted by a long and tedious restraint in other prisons, and we on the sudden conveyed hither not being able wth all our endeauo^{rs} to procure our stay for some few dayes, wch we earnestly craued to furnish o^{r}selues of such meanes as were necessary to prolong our discomfortable liues, are therby brought to those straights as we see no meane if these articles be as severely executed as they be strictly sett downe, but of necessity we must fall into extreame calamity of penury and famine, for that we cannot send to o^{r} frends abroad for our necessary releefe either letter or message wthout drawing them for their charity into ye compasse of greater danger, neither can they repaire or send vnto vs wthout ye like hazard: so that in no likelyhood we can find meanes to vndergoe the charge though it were very much diminished from what is sett downe. Yet for the present we are willing to giue 2^{s} 4^{d} by the weeke for a bed, whether we lye together or seuerall, and are desirous to content our selues wth such meane dyett as o^{r} weake fortunes will allow vs, wch we desire may be of our owne providing. For the fees we haue payd them allready in our former prisons, and are vnable now to satisfye so great a summe, besides that we are very credibly informed that our Predecessors whose meanes were much better and liberty far greater were neuer demaunded such dutyes, yet if their LL^{ps} shall be pleased to remoue or release vs at what time onely we are informed those duties if any such be are customaryly demaunded, we will giue to ye Keeper such content as we are able. Humbly crauing that in the meane time we be not abridged of the small liberty of this house, and the mutuall comfort of one anothers conversation, being ready in all submissiue duty vpon better consideration to shew vnto their LL^ps the reasons we haue to complaine of the burthen of diuerse other of (f. 215^b) the articles, the like wherof haue neuer yet been heard to haue been prescribed to men of our profession and quality.

II. PRISONERS' ADDRESS TO KING JAMES I.

(f. 217.)

Most puisaunt and Orientall Monarch.

Sutch are the rare perfections and admirable giftes of wisdome prudence vallor and iustice wherw^th the bountifulnes of godes diuine Matie is in ye depth of yowr prouident iudgement we doubt not but yow forsee what concerneth both the spirituall and temporall gouerment of all yowr kingdomes and dominions. Notw^thstanding yowr graces most aflicted seruauntes and deuoted subiectes ye Catholiques of England partely to preuent sinister informacions wch happely maye possesse yowr sacred eares before our aunswears be heard, and partly as men ouerwhelmed wth persecutions for our consciences, wear enforced to haue speedy recourse in hope of speedy redresse. And to present these humble lines vnto yowr royall person to plead for vs commiseracion & fauour. Alas what alleagaunce can any temporall prince desire or expect? How many noble men & gentlemen most zealous in the catholique religion haue endured, some losse of landes & liuinge, some exile, other imprisonment, some the effusion of bloud, and all for ye aduauncement of yowr blessed mother to ye scepter of Albian Naie whose fingers did ake but catholiques of yowr Maties present titles and dominions, how many fled to yowr court offringe themselues as hostages for ther freindes to liue and die in yowr graces quarrell, if euer aduersarie had opposed themselues against the equitye of yowr cause. Yf this attempted wth ther Princes disgrace, and yowr graces fauour the menne of this Realme yf we respect religion setting pettie scectes aside consisteth in 4 partes: protestauntes who haue domineared all ye Queenes dayes: puritanes who haue crept apace amongest them, Atheistes or polliticians who wear bred vpon ther brawles and contencions in matters of faith. The Catholiques who as they weare opposite to all so are they detested of all because error was euer enuyinge to truth. Soe we beseech yowr maiestie to yeeld vs as mutch fauour of contrarie religion, as that wch shalbe publiquelye professed in England shall obtaine at yowr handes, for if our faultes be like, lesse, or none at all, in equitie our punishment ought to be like lesse or none at all. The Gates Arches and Piramides of Fraunce proclaimed the present kinge Pater patriæ . . . . . is restitutor, because the kingdome being well nighe torne in pieces wth intestine and ciuill warrs and made a praye of forraighne foes, was by his prouident wisedome gouerment and vallore acquieted in it self & hostile strangers exiled, the wch he principally effected by condescendinge to tollerate them or any aduerse religion to that wch was openly professed. Questionles dread soueraighne y^e kingdome of England by ciuiłł persecutions of catholiques hath bin odious almost to ałł christian nations. Trades and traffiques are exceedingly decayed, warrs and bloudshed hath seldome ceased. Subsidies & taskes neuer so many, discontented mindes innumerable. Ałł wch yowr Maties princely countenaunce to yowr humble suppliaunt afflicted Catholiques wiłł easylye redresse. Especially at this yowr Maties ingresse. Si loquamur ad eos uerba lænia erunt tibi serui cunctis diebus saith the counsełł of Salomon to Roboam for enl . . . . . after afliction is like a pleasaunt gale after a vehement tempest, & a benefitt in distresse doub[les] the valewe therof. How gratefułł wiłł it be to ałł catholique princes and honorable to yowr Matie to vnderstand that Queene Elizabethes seueritye is chaunged into yowr royałł clemencie And ye lenitie of a man hath reedified that wch the misinformed anger of a woman hath destroyed. That ye Lyon rampaunt is passant, wheras the passant hath bin rampant. How acceptable shałł yowr subiectes be to all catholique countries (who are now almost abhorde of ałł men) when they shałł perceiue that yowr highnes prepareth not pikes & prisons for the professors of the faith: but permitteth them temples and altars for the vse of ther religion when we shałł see wth our eyes and touch wth our fingers that happie benediction of Esaye in this land that swordes are chaunged into plowes, & lances in to sythes and ałł nations admiring vs wiłł saye, hi sunt cui benedicit deus. We request no more fauour at yowr graces handes then that we maye securely beleeue & professe that catholique religion, wch all our happie (f. 217^b^) predecessors professed, from Donaldus first conquerour vntiłł yowr Maties pearelesse mother last martired, a religion vennerable for antiquitye, maiesticałł for amplitude, constant for continewance Irreprehensible for doctrine, enducinge to ałł kind of vertue & piety, diswading from ałł sinne & wickednes, a religion beleeued of ałł primitiue apostles, established by ałł canonicałł counsells, vpheld by ałł auncient Doctors, maintayned by the first & last christian emperors, recorded almost in ałł ecclesiasticałł histories, sealed wth the bloud of Million of martirs, adorned wth the vertues of so many professors bewtified wth the puritie of thousandes of virgins, so comfortable to naturałł sence & reason, & finally most agreeable to the sacred text of godes word & gospell. The freenes of religion we request it not wth approbacion yet with tolleracion w^th^out molestacion. Assure yowr Matie that Howsoeuer somme protestauntes or puritanes incite wth some morrałł honestie of lyfe or instinct of nature or for feare of some temporałł punishment, pretend obedience to yowr highnes lawes; yet certainly only the Catholiques for conscience sake obserue them. For protestauntes defend that princes preceptes & statutes oblige no subiectes vnder the penalty of sinne, wth little care of conscience in conscience to transgresse the wch principally is tormented wth gale of sinne, But catholiques confessing merrites in obeying or demerrites in transgressing in transgressing [sic MS.], cannot but be grieuously tormented for the preseruacion therof. Wherfore most mercifułł soueraighne we yowr longe aflicted subiectes in ałł dutifułł submission protest before the Matie of god and ałł his holy angels as lawfułł obedience and immaculate seruice to yowr grace as euer did faithfułł subiectes in England and Scotland & to yowr highnes progenitors, and intend as sincearly to serue yow wth our goodes and liues as euer did the Israelites to king Dauid, or the Turkes alleagaunce to the romaine Emperor. And thus expectinge yowr Matie conformarie fauor and gratious bounty we rest yowr deuoted subiectes in him whose handes can mannage the hartes of kinges & wth recip[r]ocrate merrites will acquite ye mercifull.

Yowr Sacred Maties most deuoted seruauntes the Catholiques of England.

III. THE KEEPER OF WISBEACH CASTLE TO THE BISHOP OF ELY

(f. 219.) The marginal notes are in a different hand.

My verie Honorable good Lord,

I ame bolde to solicite your Lo^pp^ wth ye Occurrentes in Wisbeche Castell, concerning the Recusantes committed to my Charge, who ye first weeke of theire committem^t^ were dieted at my charge whereof they haue paid me part, And the rest they haue promised so soone as theire meanes and wantes are supplied, being so much as I disbursed for that weekes diett, And being not able to continue that charge anie longer, desired that they might diett themselues, wch I durst not yeld vnto before I know yor Lo: Directions therein: But I haue putt them ouer to Mr Blancke for theire next weekes Diett at ye rate of v^s^ the man. But as for the Fees of theire Comittment they answeare they haue paid y^t^ once before, and are not able to paie anie more for the same; And allso for theire Lodgeinges they haue paid me part: And the rest they will satisfie after the rate of iij^s^ a weeke, so soone as they haue anie money: And they intend to furnishe theire owne Chambers so fast as they are able: But (my good Lord) they hold them selues greatly Discontent in that they are barred from theire freindes Companie who are the onely meanes for theire maintenance. For except they maie Conferre wth them about theire wantes, and haue such accesse vnto them as they haue hadd in times paste, they will haue no body Come to them for feare they should be brought in question for theire Religion: Therefore they are Like to contynue in greate want, except it please the Councell to giue a litle more Libertie then the strictnes of theire orders will extend, For they dare not write to theire freindes nor theire freindes to them because theire Lettres must be viewed by theire Keeper vppon what occasion soeuer, wch they thinck to be verie strict, that the necessitie of theire busines must be knowne to others as well as to them selues, By reason whereof they will not write at all, And so by that meanes must lyue still in want. But if it pleaseth his Matie to allow them maintenance they are contente to endure anie straight keeping that it shall please his Matie to inflict vppon them: They allso thinck themselues greatlie wronged to haue theire bookes taken from them, being no other but such as they haue hadd allwaies allowed them in theire former ymprisonem^tes^ and such as they say are tollerated by the present State and are to be bought in Paules Churche Yard: They account them selues as close prisoners in that they are kept in theire Chambers vntill 10, or 11, of the Clocke according to the articles, wch I dare not anie waie enlardge except yt please the Councell to gyue some tolleracion: Some frindes of theires haue come to Wisbeche, whoe hearing of the strictnes of ye Councelles orders durst not come to them for feare of further daunger.

Kept close in the mornings.

(f. 219b.) These theire discontentes, except they maie be somewhat qualified are likely to driue them into some desperate courses, wch my self not haueing aucthoritie by Commission to bridle theire wilfulnes, but must be faine to praie the aide of the next Justices adioyninge who peraduenture being then otherwise ymploied shall not be neere hand to assist me vppon such occasions, I maie receiue great hurt and detrement by them: For except yt please the Councel to mittigate the orders, I shall not gett from them anie allowance neyther for Lodginges Chamber Dyett nor anie thing elles by reason of theire wantes, and Discontentmtes, As for the precedentes for the Orders of the Fleete, they are not able to performe anie of them: Thus I ame bold to impart vnto yor Lordship the State of the Last weekes busines, And as further occasions shall serue, I will certifie Your Lpp of all proceedinges, being hartily sorie that your Lpp (as I heare) hath beene sicke of an ague wch I praie God to asswage, and to send your Lppes health to his diuine pleasure. Referring all these busines to your honorable wisedome and Discretion I humblie take my Leaue.

LETTERS OF THE ARCHPRIEST HARRISON RELATIVE TO THE APPOINTMENT OF AN AGENT AT THE ROMAN CURIA, &c.

TRANSCRIBED AND TRANSLATED BY DOM GILBERT DOLAN, O.S.B.

THE Nuntio at the Court of Brussels was in many ways more closely connected with England than any other Papal representative. The majority of the English colleges and convents lay in Belgium, and he was geographically nearer to London than any other Nuntio. There were, therefore, many reasons for Dr. Harrison's frequent communication with this ecclesiastical centre. Unfortunately, the name of the proposed agent does not appear. We only learn that he was the brother of the secretary to the Nuntio, who at this time was Monsignor Lucio Sanseverino, Archbishop of Salerno. The MS. from which this is printed is a contemporary draft or copy belonging to Miss Harting. Copied on the same sheet of paper and the first letter bearing the later date, it seems probable that it was a covering one to the others relating to the appointment of agent at the Curia Romana. The vacancy for the name of the agent in the letter-patent may have been left for the Nuntio to fill in correctly. These and other documents may throw light on one another.

Illustrissimo Nuntio Belgico:
Secretario ejus Agenti nostro fratri.

Illustrissime Domine,

Solitus sum vernali et æstivo tempore visitare partes remotiores regni, ut disciplinam ecclesiasticam (quantum fieri potest in his turbulentissimis temporibus) conservare, concordiam mutuam pacemque nutrire dissensiones et contentiones si quæ fuerint compescere queam: quæ causa fuit silentii mei, quo hucusque usus sum ut litteris vestris vernalibus, quæ aliquantulo tardius ad me pervenerunt respondere nequivi. Nunc vero vel imprimis, tibi gratias quas potero ago exhibeo certe maximas pro ultimis ad me tuis litteris omni humanitate ac charitate plenis in quibus omnia amoris officia pro nobis hic in Anglia offerre ac præstare dignatus es, sicut de reipsa et de facto Reverendo Domino Matthæo Kellisono præsidi meritissimo collegii nostri Duaceni sæpe contulisti, quod te protegente nunc reflorescere ac pristinum splendorem recuperare videtur. Ideoque de felici progressu illius collegii spem maximam concipiens plura dicere supersedeo, et ad miserabilem luctuosumque patriæ nostræ Angliæ statum redeo, de qua licet mœrore ac squallore oppressa, in spem maximam tamen erectus sum, ut Deus tandem aliquando miseraturus populi sui afflicti, et persecutionis quæ catholicis per universum regnum affligit: maxime vero præfectus partium borealium sævit, qui sacerdotem sæcularem crudeliter more solito trucidandum præcepit, die noctuque exploratores suos mittens qui catholicos deprehendere, incarcerare ac bonis suis spoliare domi forisque invigilant: facinorisque ejus nephandum inter multa alia referam, quod me non longe distante contigit. Cum unus ex hujus præfecti lictoribus cursitanduit, intravit in domum cujusdam catholici nocte, invenitque eum cum uxore qui strepitum audiendo, e lecto se erigebat sicque illum interfecit, uxoremque multis vulneribus ac plagis sauciavit cumque nobilis quidam de hoc nephando scelere in comitiis conquæstus sit, respondebat homicida, quod surgere voluit ut gladium suum acciperet prope lectum, resisteretque magistratui, vel interficeret, unde iniquus judex, minas et terrores contra uxorem fulminans, interfectorem mariti sui facile liberavit, brevitatique studens data opera hujusmodi multa lubens .... endo. In australi plaga prope Londinum mitius agitur ne nuptiæ principis nostri cum Infanta Hispaniæ impedirentur: nihilominus tamen in civitate Londinensi lictores et exploratores quotidie cursitant, et in carceres more solito conjiciunt, quosdam vero adeo stricte ac severe custodiunt, ut nullus sit illis aditus aut colloquium, reliquos paulo liberiores detinent, ita tamen ut nullo modo egredi, quam urgente occasione queant, nec colloquium cum amicis permittitur, nisi audiente custode carceris. In oriente et occidente ac remotioribus austri partibus clamor ubique pro executione legum pœnalium ac capitalium contra catholicos: Unde etiam nuper rumor ingens percrebuit de quibusdam interficiendis sacerdotibus sed jam evanuit, nihilominus inter spem metumque hæremus, quid in posterum fiet, magis tamen sperantes meliora. Interim Deum Optimum Maximum deprecor quicquid contigerit ut felix faustusque in suum honorem nostramque salutem qui Illustrissimam Dominationem vestram quam diutissime nobis et ecclesiæ suæ servet incolumem. TRANSLATION.

[Endorsed.]

To the most Illustrious the Nuntio in Flanders and to his Secretary, our agent's brother.

Most Illustrious Lord,

It is my custom during spring time and summer to visit the more distant parts of the kingdom, that I may labour (so far as is possible in these most disturbed times) for the preservation of ecclesiastical discipline, for the strengthening of mutual concord and peace, and the quieting of dissensions and contentions should any such arise; and this has been the reason for the silence which I have up till now observed in regard to your spring letters, which reached me a little later than usual. And now to begin with, I tender you my best thanks for your last letters to me, full as they were of all that kindness and affection which prompts you to offer and to perform whatever your love for us here in England can suggest; as indeed you have already so often shown in your dealings with the Rev. D. Matthew Kellison, the most worthy President of our College at Douay, which under your protection seems now to flourish anew and to have recovered its former reputation. Feeling, as I do, so great a hope of the happy progress of that college, I need not say more on the point, but come back again to the sad and most distressing state of this England of ours; but although it be borne down by oppression and misery, I am none the less full of a firm hope that God would at length take pity on His afflicted people, and put an end to the persecution which is waged on all the Catholics of the realm. The fiercest of our persecutors is the Prefect of the North, who (lately) caused a secular priest to be put to death in the usual cruel way, and who sends his pursuivants by day and night, to be ever in readiness at home and abroad, to arrest the Catholics, put them into prison and despoil them of their goods. I will speak only of one of many among the disgraceful acts of his cruel treatment of us, which occurred at no great distance from the place where I was staying. One of the agents of this Prefect in the course of his rounds came one night to the house of a certain Catholic, and found both him and his wife in bed; the wife, hearing the noise, sat up in bed, whereupon he slew her husband, and wounded the wife with many wounds and sores; and when a certain nobleman complained of this wicked treatment at the assizes (?), the murderer replied that (his victim) had attempted to rise to take up his sword, which was near his bedside, and would have resisted the magistrate, or slain him; whereupon the unjust judge, uttering threats and terrors against the widow, set her husband's murderer at liberty without any further difficulty. But, for the sake of brevity, I will pass over many occurrences of this nature. In the southern part of the country and nearer to London things go more smoothly, lest the projected match between our Prince and the Infanta of Spain should be hindered; but all the same, in the city of London pursuivants and spies are daily at work, and many Catholics are still thrown into jail. Some are kept so strictly that none may have access to them, or communication of any sort; some are kept a little less closely, yet so that they may not leave the prison however urgent the necessity; nor are they allowed to have any talk with their friends, save in the hearing of the keeper of the prison. Everywhere in the east and west, and in the more remote parts of the south, there is a public cry for the execution of the penal laws and sentence of death against the Catholics; hence a widely-spread rumour was in circulation lately about the probable execution of certain priests, but now it has died down; all the same, we live in uncertainty betwixt fear and hope as to what will happen, hoping however for better times. Meanwhile I ask Almighty God that whatever comes to pass may prove to be of happy import and to His honour and our safety; and may He long preserve your most illustrious lordship to us and to His Church.

Given at London this 13 day of December, 1618.

Your most illustrious Lordship's very loving

Will. Har[rison], Archpriest, Protonotary Apostolic.

Reverend Sir,

I have received letters from the Rev. Matthew Kelison, President of our English College at Douay in Flanders, and have learnt from them of the great interest and love which the most illustrious Nuntio in Belgium bears towards our nation: . . . . . the aforesaid Rev. President of our College at Douay, who also told me of the affection and goodwill of your brother towards us in Belgium. Hence the Rev. President of our College made known to the Most Illustrious Nuntio, and to your brother his secretary, that our affairs in the [Roman] Court cannot be brought to a successful issue because we have no agent there to look after our interests, and accordingly it was arranged between them that, as you are well known at the Curia, accustomed to its ways and highly commended, you should be invited to undertake the work. And therefore the Rev. President of our College has written to me that I should forward my letters to your lordship, whereby I give you authority and power to execute the business of the English clergy in the Roman Curia; and this, with the consent of my assistants, I hereby make known to you; and when I shall have ascertained their opinion and obtained their consent on certain matters, I will let you know what has to be done in the future. Meanwhile I commend myself earnestly to your prayers.

Given on the 9th of December, 1618.

Your Lordship's most affectionately,

Wil. Har[rison], Archpriest, Proton. Apos.

Be it known to all persons whom this letter may reach that I, William Harrison, Archpriest of England and Protonotary Apostolic, have, with the consent of my assistant brethren, appointed the Rev. ,* Procurator and Agent of the English Clergy, to attend to its business in the Roman Curia. To the truth and witness whereof I have to these letters affixed my name and my public official seal. December 9, 1618.

Reverend Sir,

Although there are few matters in this my office of Archpriest which bring with them any enjoyment or pleasure, especially at this time, when our condition is so uneasy by reason of the fresh storms of persecution which daily arise: and since I undertook this office grudgingly and against my will, but, God so disposing, according to the will of our most holy [Father the Pope] and of others, I must try to be ready and prompt in facing all dangers and labours, and as well as I can to bear my burden, heavy though it may be, for the love of Christ. I should be afraid of succumbing to its weight were I not supported by the assistance and solicitude of my friends and the kind services of others, among whom you must surely be reckoned if the report of ours speaks truly. And as I cannot (in person), I will ever hold in grateful memory those offices of kindness and charity which you have rendered to me, a stranger at a distance, and the most timely aid which you have given with kind and ready will to the watchful and worthy President of our College at Douay in the affairs and needs of that institution. And although we have often experienced your affection in other weighty cases, we owe you a fresh debt of gratitude for so kindly arranging that your brother (who is so highly spoken of) should undertake to see to our affairs in the Curia. Not to detain you longer, I commend myself to your prayers, begging Almighty God to have you in His safe keeping.

Given at London December the 9th, 1618.

Your Lordship's most obedient servant,
William Har[rison], Archpriest of England and Protonotary Apostolic.

A CHAPTER NECROLOGY

OCT. 1670–FEB. 1678

FROM THE ORIGINAL MS. IN THE BODLEIAN LIBRARY, OXFORD, RAWLINSON, D. 173

CONTRIBUTED BY MISS LOUISE F. GUINEY

THE writer, the Rev. Alexander Holt alias Rigby, was secretary to the Chapter. He was a Lancashire man, being the son of Nicholas Holt and his wife Grace, who was probably a Rigby. He was born in 1629, entered the English College at Rome December 23, 1652, was ordained priest December 17, 1656, and left the College for the Mission April 20, 1659. He was acting as secretary to the Chapter in 1667, in succession to John Sergeant. (Vide Bib. Dict. v, 491.) On November 14, 1671, he was elected a canon, and in the following year he wrote "A Defence of the Chapter," the MS. of which is now at Oscott College. The date of his resignation of the secretaryship is not before me, but I find that Dr. John Betham and Dr. Bonaventure Giffard were appointed canons and secretaries on May 29, 1681. Mr. Holt died October 12, 1685. J. GILLOW.

The names of those of ye Cl: that dyed after Mr Holts being Secretary.

No. IX.

THE CATHOLIC REGISTERS OF HOLYWELL, FLINTSHIRE

Part I. "The Cross Keys" or Secular Mission
Part II. "Ye Old Star" or Jesuit Mission

THE records of Holywell, though scanty, are of some interest from the fact that this town, famous for many centuries for its miraculous Well, continued to be the resort of pious pilgrims even during the worst days of persecution. Another unusual feature is that, though hardly more than a village, there were in it at one time three, and for many generations two, missions. The Secular Clergy and Jesuits made Holywell a centre for their long and arduous circuits amongst the remote towns and villages in North Wales. The Franciscans resolved to found a house here in 1687, and Father Michael Russel was appointed Preses, but the residence was soon given up.*

The Secular and Jesuit priests during the penal times lived at the "Cross Keys" and the "Star" respectively. These inns were situate one on each side of the present Catholic Church, and the clergy seem to have adopted this strange expedient to allay suspicion which might arise from the presence of strangers. The following is a list of the clergy serving Holywell up to the Catholic Emancipation, the date to which I have continued the Registers:—

THE "CROSS KEYS." SECULAR MISSION.

†(1) John Plesington alias Scarisbrick, martyred at Chester 1679, served Holywell for some time between 1665 and 1679, but was priest at Puddington Hall, Cheshire, at the time of his seizure and martyrdom.§

(2) John Price alias Bryan, son of Richard Price of St. Asaph's, was born in or about the year 1647. He was sent to Douay College, and when twenty-two years of age was admitted into the English College at Rome September 29, 1669, where he was ordained priest April 16, 1672, but remained at the College till April, 1676, when he left for the English Mission, and if not in that year, came soon afterwards to the Cross Keys in Holywell, where he passed the remainder of his missionary career. He was alive in 1694, but the date of his death has not been ascertained. During the reign of James II Mr. Price procured a lease of the ancient chapel over the Well, and had possession given up to him by Sir Roger Mostyn, of Mostyn, Bart. It was the Queen's pleasure, however, that the Jesuits should have the chapel for their use, and they demanded the key from Mr. Price. On his refusal to deliver it, the door was broken open, and Mr. Price ejected. He appealed for redress to Sir Roger Mostyn, who acknowledged that the lease was duly executed, but declined to incur her Majesty's displeasure by opposing the proceedings, though he was in favour of the secular's claim to the right of patronage to the chapel. Upon this the Queen wrote to him from Whitehall, under date May 8, 1687, informing him that the King had been pleased by royal grant to bestow upon her Majesty the ancient chapel adjoining St. Winefrid's Well, and desiring him to present possession in her name to Father Thomas Roberts, the Jesuit incumbent of the Star, who would deliver her Majesty's letter into Sir Roger's hands. This unfortunate dispute was the cause of lasting unpleasantness.

(3) Peter Wynne alias Bodwell, son of Griffin Wynne and his wife, Dorothy Parry, of Carnarvonshire. He studied at St. Omer's College and Ghent for five years, and was admitted into the English College at Rome September 28, 1655, at the age of eighteen. He was ordained priest November 21, 1660. Two or three years later he left Rome for the English Mission, and eventually he seems to have succeeded Father Price to the Cross Keys, and is met with here in 1702 and about 1715.

(4) William Wilmot, whose earlier career cannot be traced, as probably he passed under some other name, was present at the Chapter of 1694, acting as deputy for Mr. George Barrett, Archdeacon of Shropshire and part of Herefordshire. According to evidence before the Commissioners for Forfeited Estates in July, 1718, Mr. Wilmot took up his residence at the Cross Keys Inn, Holywell, in 1716, and boarded with Thomas Parry, the innholder, at £6 per annum, the chapel being in the house. Mr. Wilmot was arrested by the wretched apostate, Richard Hitchinough, in 1716, but was soon released, and continued to reside at the Cross Keys until his death, August 2, 1720.

(5) John Roberts, son of William Roberts and his wife, Elizabeth Watkins, of Montgomeryshire, was admitted into the English College, Rome, June 25, 1705, aged 32, and was ordained priest 22 December, 1708, and left the College for England April 13, 1713. He succeeded Mr. Wilmot, and remained at the Cross Keys till his death, January 6, 1753, aged 80.

(6) John Gwillims alias Williams was admitted into the English College at Lisbon September 22, 1735, and was ordained priest in June, 1739, and came to England in 1743. He succeeded Mr. Roberts at the Cross Keys in 1753, and continued here till his death, April 3, 1763.

(7) Philip Jones, son of Edward Jones, of Clytha, and his wife, Clare Fitzgerald, born 29 September, 1722, became an alumnas at Douay in his first year's philosophy, 27 December, 1741, and was ordained priest December 17, 1746. He succeeded Mr. Gwillims here in 1763, and remained till his death, August 10, 1800, aged almost 78. He was a member of the old Chapter, and was held in the highest respect. He left a fund for the Secular Mission of Holywell in the hands of Mr. George Gildart, his executor, who, on the advice of Bishop Sharrock, transferred it to Monmouth, where it was more wanted than at Holywell, there being another chapel here, and but a small congregation.

(8) George Thomas Gildart, born 1764, was sent to Sedgley Park School in 1774. and thence proceeded to the English College at Valladolid, where he was ordained priest. On returning to England he was stationed for a time in London, Stonor Park (Oxon.), and Gloucester. Upon Mr. Jones' death he went to Holywell, and took possession of the effects of the Cross Keys Mission, but resided with Father Edward Wright, S.J., at the Star. Mr. Gildart commenced his registers in 1801. He sold the Cross Keys in 1802, and transferred the funds of the mission to Monmouth, where he served the mission for twenty years,* and opened the first public chapel in that town. He retired in ill-health to Usk, then to Brecon, and ended his days at Swansea February 17, 1827, aged 63.

The "Star." Jesuit Mission.

(1) John Bennett (alias Price, Floyd, and Baker), son of John Hugh Bennett, of Flintshire, ordained at Douay 1578, and sent on the mission 1580. In 1582 he was tried before the Bishop of St. Asaph, and the next year, at the Assizes at Holywell, was condemned to death. This sentence having been commuted, he was taken to Ludlow Castle, and there imprisoned and cruelly tortured. A Protestant minister visited him when on the rack, and in an arrogant manner sought to argue with him. Father Bennett said, "Seeing nothing will satisfy this babbling fellow but a loquacious dispute, I pray you hoist him up on another rack, that from similar pulpits we may argue the matter on equal terms." Father Bennett was afterwards banished the kingdom, and entered the Society of Jesus in 1586 at Verdun. At the risk of his life he returned to his former mission in 1590, and laboured with much fruit; "the poor and meaner sort of people flocked to him in such multitudes to receive the spiritual cordials and divine food which he freely and copiously ministered to them, that in the depth of night he used to have an hundred of them in one assembly. In his lifetime they commonly called him 'the Saint.'"† One of Father Bennett's converts was Ed. Morgan alias Singleton, of Bettisfield, co. Flint, * cf. Cath. Rec. Soc. Miscellanea, vol. i, p. 290.

who went to the English College, Rome, and after his ordination was imprisoned in the Fleet for fourteen or fifteen years, and eventually martyred at Tyburn, April 26, 1642. Father Bennett died in London December 25, 1625.

(2) Humphrey Evans, S.J., alias Brown, is thought by Foley (Records, v, 936, vii. 232) to have succeeded Father Bennett, but it is doubtful. Father Evans was a native of Carnarvonshire, and after the usual course of studies at Rome became a Jesuit. After fifty-three years of apostolic labour he was seized with apoplexy at Pool Hall, Cheshire, and the pursuivants of Shaftesbury and the Privy Council, in searching the manor on Christmas Day, 1678, dragged him out of bed and cruelly beat him, thus hastening his death, which occurred three weeks later, at the age of 82.

1 Hugh Owen, S.J., alias John Hughes, was born in Anglesea 1615, ordained at the English College, Rome, 1641, and became a Jesuit in 1648. He is mentioned in 1679 as one of the three Jesuits who had alone survived the storm of the Oates Plot persecution in North Wales. He published, among other works, a Welsh Catechism, a prayer book, and an Imitation of Christ, "Dilyniad Crist." He died in Holywell December 28, 1686, aged 71.[2]

(4) Thomas or Roderick Roberts, a native of Carnarvonshire, born 1645, was living at the Star the same time as Mr. John Price was at the Cross Keys. He went to Welshpool probably during the reign of James II, where his house was attacked and the chapel plundered during the Orange Revolution of 1688. Though a party of soldiers spent six weeks in the neighbourhood trying to find the priest, he escaped their hands, hiding in woods and ditches. It is recorded of him that for the greater part of two summers he slept in the open fields, rather than endanger the safety of his friends by seeking their hospitality.[3]

[John Floyd alias Fisher served the Welsh district from 1632, and died, possibly at Holywell, August 29, 1670.[4]]

(5) Ignatius Thorpe alias Stafford was here in December, 1698, and still here in July, 1699, as evidenced by his registers at Worcester (printed by Crisp as Worcester Registers).[5]

(6) Edmund Thorold, senior, was superior of the district 1701–4, and may have been here earlier. He was at Welshpool in 1688, when he was arrested and imprisoned for nine months. He died November 7, 1715, aged 58.[6]

(7) George Griffith, born in the county of Flint, 1668–9, was here probably for many years. He died in Holywell August 2, 1718, aged 50.[7]

(8) Philip Leigh alias Layton and Metcalfe, was at Powis Castle in 1710, and probably came to Holywell in 1715. He died here 31 January, 1717.[8]

(9) Thomas Roberts, born in Anglesea, 1673, served the mission of Holywell for many years. He died here May 2, 1727, aged 54.[9]

(10) Richard Moore, a native of Warwickshire, born 1672, served Holywell from 1727 to 1731, and again from about 1740 until his death here, 1753, aged 81.

(11) John Hill, born in Montgomeryshire 1683, was here for some years.[10]

(12) John Williams, a native of Monmouthshire, served this mission for many years. He died at Holywell September 23, 1761, aged 70.[11]

(13) Thomas Daniel alias West was missioner here for a short time, probably succeeding Father Williams.

(14) John Sale, a native of Lancashire, served Holywell for a short time after Father Daniel.

[1] Mr. Gillow is almost certain that Father Charles Gwynne alias Bodwell and Brown was at Holywell, and probably came as early as 1623. (See Foley's Records, iv, vi, vii, 325.)

(15) Joseph Tyrer was stationed here from 1763 to 1768, and again from 1776 to 1798, the date of his death.[1]

(16) Michael Moseley, a native of Lincolnshire, served this mission for some twelve years. Died November 29, 1777, aged 57.[2]

(17) Edward Wright, born 1752, was here for many years. He died in Holywell April 9, 1826, after renewing his vows in the restored Society.[3]

(18) Henry Wright succeeded Father Edward Wright for a very short time, 1825.[4]

(19) Francis Lythgoe, a native of Cheshire, came to Holywell October 30, 1826. He built the new chapel, which was opened November 13, 1833.[5]

It should be mentioned that even during the darkest days of persecution Catholics openly resorted to the Well, especially on St. Winefrid's Feast. An interesting document, preserved in the Public Record Office, endorsed "A note of Papists and priests assembled at St. Winefrid's Well on St. Winefrid's Day, 1629," gives the following names:—

> "The Lord Wm Howard ("Belted Will"), the L. of Shrewsburie, Sir Tho. Jarrett (Gerard), Sir Wm Norris, Sir Cuthbert Clifton, Mr Preston of ye Manner (Furness), Mr Anderton of Clerton (Clayton), Mr Anderton of Foarste, Mr Jarret (Gerard) of Ince, Mr Bradshaw of Haye (Haigh Hall), Mr Harrington of Heighletonhye (Huyton Hey), Mr Blundell of Crosbie, Mr Scarisbricke of Scarisbricke, Sir John Talbot of Bradshaw (Bashall Hall), Mr Latham of Mosborow (Mosborough Hall) and his five brothers, who are all priests; the Lady Foakeland (Falkland), and with her Mr Everard the priest; Mr Price, Mr Cleiton (Clayton), priests; Sir Thomas Jarrett hath two priestes resident in his house, namely Pettinger (Dom Dunstan Pettinger, O.S.B.) and Umpton. At Sir William Norris's house (Speke Hall) two, namely Richardson (Robert) and Holland; at Sir Cuthbert Clifton's two priests, Anderton & Smith; also Mr Arrowsmith's clothes and the knife to cut him up are at Sir Cuthbert Clifton's house. Mr Preston of the Manner hath two priests at his house, viz. Michitt (? Jno. Mitchell) and Sefton (John), and Mr Mayfield, the priest (? Wm. Maxfield), is archdeacon under the Bishop of Chalcedon, of Speake near the sea-side; with divers other knights, ladies, gentlemen and gentlewomen of divers countries to ye number of fourteen or fifteen hundreth; and the general estimation about a hundred and fifty more priestes, the most of them well known what they were."

This note, evidently the work of a Government spy, shows that it would be wrong to infer, from such a public assembly of Catholics, that Holywell was exempt from those little marks of attention wherewith a Protestant Government sought to spread the new religion. These pilgrimages had been held before, and that the Government knew of them may be plainly seen from the correspondence between Sir John Bridgman, Mayor of Poole in Montgomeryshire, and the Privy Council. Sir John's letter of October 23, 1626, explains the steps he had taken (according to instructions) to restrain the Holywell pilgrimages. That his efforts were unavailing we infer from another letter, dated February 10, 1636, in which he informs the Privy Council that he is suppressing all unnecessary alehouses thereabouts, binding all innkeepers to take the names and addresses of strangers who lodge with them, and keeping a strict watch on the Well, which, if necessary, he will wall up.

This introduction has already run to such a length that it is impossible to refer in detail to the great families, Mostyns of Talacre, Herberts, Earls of Powis, Petres of Basingwerk (Greenfield), Pues of Penrhyn, Carnarvonshire, and many others, who did so much to keep the lamp of the sanctuary burning during the dark night of persecution.

The earliest register begins 1730, and is not original, but seems to have been copied by Father Ed. Wright, S.J. The second volume is original. A portion of Father Wright's registers is found in each volume, as I have indicated on page 126. The two volumes are 8¼ in. by 6½ in., bound half sheep, and several pages have been cut or torn out, as noted later. Several pages are covered with housekeeping accounts.

These so-called 'Worcester Registers' were entered by Father Ignatius Thorpe alias Stafford (and Potter and Xavier when at St. Omer's College and St. Alban's College at Valladolid), S.J., in a little private volume, which he carried about with him from place to place during his missionary career. The entries commence May 9, 1685, whilst Father Stafford was stationed at the Jesuit house in Mounce Street, Monmouth, whence he would appear to have occasionally served High Meadow, co. Gloucester, the seat of the Halls, Lydney, in the same county, the seat of Sir Charles Wynter, Abergavenny, Courtfield, in Welsh Bicknor, the seat of the Vaughan family, and Chepstow Grange, all in the county of Monmouth; Ruardine, Whiteleeve, Woollaston Grange, and Brockweir, the two last seats of the Harris family, all in Gloucestershire. Between November, 1689, and November, 1694, there is a gap, the entries recommencing in the latter year with a baptism at Preston, probably the place of that name situated some five or six miles from Linstead Lodge, Kent, the property of Lord Teynham, to where Father Stafford was sent upon his return to England; for at the time of the Orange Revolution he was imprisoned, and after his release had sought refuge on the Continent. From Linstead he served Dadmonds in June, 1695, and next appears as chaplain to Ferdinand Poulton, Esq., at Desborough, co. Northampton, in May, 1697. Early in 1698 he was at Writtle Park in Essex, the seat of Lord Petre, whom he probably accompanied to London, and was there in June of that year. Thence he removed to Holywell, as shown on page 107. From October, 1699, to July, 1700, he appears as chaplain to the Knights at Kingerby Hall, co. Lincoln. There are no entries for 1701, and those for 1702 mention no locality. From the latter year there is a gap till November, 1706, when he appears as chaplain to the Giffards at Boscobel, co. Stafford, till December, 1709, then at West Grinstead, Sussex, in March, 1709–10, probably supplying for Father Livinius Brown, S.J., till May, 1711. Then he became chaplain to Sir John Webb, Bart., at Great Canford, co. Dorset, whence he attended to families at Wimborne Minster, Langham, Kingston, Hampreston, and sometimes assisted at the Jesuit Mission at Stapehill, in the same county, and attended at Week, just over the border in Hants., till his entries cease with June 12, 1718. He probably had to leave the county in consequence of the troublous times succeeding the appointment of Commissioners of Enquiry into Estates given to Superstitious Purposes about this time, and he is next found at Worcester, where he succeeded Father Alex. Leigh alias Layton, S.J., in the charge of that mission. There he died June 17, 1720, aged 68. Father Stafford did not make any entries in his register at Worcester, but his immediate successor, Father William Case alias Baxter, S.J., commenced the Worcester Registers on September 24, 1720, as a continuation of the previous ones, which henceforward were looked upon as appertaining to that mission.

This account has been thus fully detailed in order to illustrate the by no means uncommon occurrence of the private registers of a priest during his missionary career in various places having been continued by his successor in the last place that he served as the registers of that mission.

No. X.

THE CATHOLIC REGISTERS OF NIDD HALL, N.R. OF YORK, 1780–1823.

THE entries are made in a small, thin note-book, size about 6½ in. by 7 in., which descended to the late Mr. Charles James Byrnand Trappes, who gave a copy of it to the Bishop of Leeds. The first few pages are apparently torn out. It only contains baptisms—no marriages or deaths. The writing, as far as I can see, is all in one hand, but from 10 December, 1803 (inclusive), a different system begins to be followed. Prior to that date the entries are in Latin, and go right across the page, but from that time (with exceptions) the page is divided into two columns; in the left the entry in Latin, in the right an English translation, both signed "Jos: Roulhac." I guess from this that Roulhac began his duties as chaplain in 1803, and started his own system, and that the similarity in the handwriting is accountable for by the supposition that he copied out the earlier entries from some old book. The first few pages, from 1763 to 1780, have been torn out. Roulhac is traceable at Cayton Grange and Masham. He went back to France after the Restoration.

Mr. Gillow has provided me with the following account, compiled from his historical collections.

There is much obscurity about the early history of Nidd Hall. The martyred priest, Peter Snow, would appear to have resided with Ralph Grimston at Nidd, and in 1598 was arrested in that gentleman's company. They were both martyred at York on June 15 of that year. On February 23, 1606, the manor and lordship of Nidd was transferred by Lord William Howard and others, apparently acting as trustees, to Sir William Mallory and Sir William Ingleby, probably trustees to the Byrnand estate for Sir Francis Trappes-Byrnand, whose father, Francis Trappes, of London, had married Anne, daughter and heir of Robert Byrnand, Esq., of Knaresborough, whose wife, Anne, was a granddaughter of Richard Neville, Lord Latimer, a descendant of King Edward III. Sir Francis Trappes, who was knighted at Windsor in 1603, assumed the additional surname of Byrnand, and was the first of his family to reside at Nidd Hall. The estate continued in the Trappes family until its sale, about 1821, by Francis Michael Trappes, Esq., but some impediments to a legal title delayed the conveyance, and hence the chapel, which was in the house, appears to have been used till the autumn of 1823. The congregation then merged into adjoining missions, and the priest, Père Roulhac, removed to Cayton Grange, a few miles north-west of Nidd.

We have only occasional glimpses of the priests serving Nidd during its tenure by the Trappes family, but they tend to indicate that the maintenance of the chapel was continuous. The two Franciscans who came over to England from their convent at Douay—Father Joseph à S. Teresia Trappes in 1674, and Father Richard Trappes alias Braithwaite in 1687—may well have served Nidd for some time. Michael Trappes-Byrnand, second son of Francis Trappes-Byrnand and his wife Jane, daughter of Michael Wharton, of Beverley, Esq., by Catherine, daughter and coheiress of Christopher Maltby, of Maltby-in-Cleveland, Esq., who was at Douay College in 1678, possibly became a priest, and if so, would doubtless be at Nidd at times. But the first name of a chaplain supported by positive evidence is that of the Rev. Augustine Smithson. He belonged to an ancient family long seated at Newsham in the North Riding of Yorkshire, was educated at Douay College, though his name does not appear in the published diaries, and came on the mission about 1663. He is stated to have lived with Mr. Trappes at Nidd for many years. He was apparently there in 1698, when he signed a declaration, in the presence of Bishop Smith, V.A.-N.D., to leave to the Church what he had acquired during his ministration. Later he removed to Long Villiers, where he died about August or September, 1717. A capitular, writing about 1693, gave him the following character: "No want of parts, but of charity a great want . . . . . a declared enemy of the Chapter."

The next priest met with is the Rev. John Dunn alias Carr, born in May, 1692, son of John Dunn and his wife Jane Carre, of the diocese of Durham. He took the oath at Douay College February 14, 1712, probably came to the mission about 1717, and was chaplain to Mr. Trappes at Nidd when Bishop Williams made his visitation in May, 1728, and gave confirmation to fifty of the congregation. Mr. Carr died in Yorkshire, possibly at Nidd, January 29, 1740.

No other name is recorded till that of the Rev. Robert Bullen, but it is most probable that his immediate predecessor went to Nidd in 1763, and commenced the missing registers from 1763–1780. He was the second son of Robert Bullen and his wife Helen Cockshed of Lancashire, and was born July 31, 1740. He was admitted into the English College at Rome February 26, 1755, and placed in the third class of grammar. He was ordained priest December 22, 1764, and left Rome for England April 25, 1765. His missionary labours are said to have been principally in Yorkshire, and he is found at Nidd in 1773 and again in 1781, when his congregation was returned at fifty communicants. He died October 9, 1792, probably at Nidd.

Père Joshua Roulhac, a French emigré, and the last priest to say Mass at Nidd, came from Bishop Thornton about the autumn of 1803, and continued to attend to the congregation till the chapel was closed, in the autumn of 1823. He then appears to have removed to Cayton Grange, a seat of the Messenger family, the former owners of Fountains Hall and the ruins of the famous abbey.

RICHARD TRAPPES-LOMAX.

* A brief memoir of the last holder of the remnant of the Nidd estate will not be out of place. The Rev. Francis Trappes, born January 28, 1790, was the eldest son of Francis Michael Trappes, and a small portion of the estate—about £200 a year—was settled upon him when Nidd was sold by his father, but this he parted with in 1849. He went to Stonyhurst June 16, 1798; in 1821 was ordained priest, and sent to the mission at Pontefract, as dominus auxiliarius Societatis. Thence he removed to St. Wilfrid's, Preston, in 1824; but in 1827 he joined the secular mission, and was appointed to Lee House in Thornley, near Chipping, of which township he was overseer and constable in 1835–6. In 1840 he became engaged in litigation with his bishop, Dr. George Brown, Vicar-Apostolic of the Lancashire District, which, after being carried to the Roman Courts, eventually ended in his favour, though meanwhile, from 1841 to 1859, the chapel at Lee House was closed. In 1853 Mr. Trappes was appointed to the mission at Chepstow, co. Monmouth,

THE OLD REGISTERS OF THE CATHOLIC MISSION OF LLANARTH IN THE COUNTY OF MONMOUTH, 1781–1838

TRANSCRIBED BY JOHN HOBSON MATTHEWS FROM THE ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPTS AT LLANARTH

Two square 8vo paper books, the first bound in stiff vellum, the second in boards. The first has on the outside of the cover:—"Bishop Sharrock's Baptismal Register to be kept at Perthyre, Monmouth or Llanarth.—P. Thespien. Jan. 25, 1813."

The Mission of Llanarth has had a more or less continuous existence ever since the ancient church of that parish was finally diverted to Protestant uses in the reign of Elizabeth. For this continuance throughout the period of Penal legislation it is indebted to the Catholic fidelity of the family of Herbert, who have been Lords of the Manor of Llanarth from the year 1456. Down to the middle of the eighteenth century Mass was said only in the domestic chapel of their mansion of Hendreobeth (now called Llanarth Court); but for the last 150 years the Catholics have assembled in the chapel which stands in the grounds at a short distance from the house.

For the benefit of genealogical readers of this Register it should be explained that the descendants of John William Thomas of Treowen and Llanarth, High Sheriff 1587, followed the Welsh custom by using his Christian name as their surname. That is to say, they bore the cognomen Jones for nine generations, until in 1848 the late Mr. John Arthur Edward Jones of Llanarth assumed by Royal Licence the surname Herbert in lieu of Jones. This was a reversion to the clan name, which had meantime been borne only by cadet branches.

The first Volume is entirely in the neat, bold, cursive handwriting of Bishop Sharrock, and nearly all the entries appear to have been written at one and the same time—probably copied from rough memoranda, as was usually done. The second Volume is in the handwriting of the Rev. William Gerard throughout, with the exception of about the last six Baptisms.

The Rev. Edward Jones served the Llanarth Mission 1774–1799, in which latter year he died there and was buried in the parish churchyard.

The Rev. William Gerard served Llanarth during 39 years, and died there 23 May 1830, aged 78. He was buried in the Jones' (Herberts') family vault in the churchyard.

The Rev. W. F. Bevan was officiating at Llanarth in 1832, and the Rev. G. F. Beavan 1833–1835.

The Rev. Samuel Fisher was priest of the Mission 1835–1865. He died at the Monastery, Pontypool, 14 January 1875, aged 84 years, and was buried in the Catholic cemetery at Usk.

The Rev. Edmund Delerue commenced his ministry at Llanarth 1865, and in 1902 was still rector of the Mission. His curate in 1901 for a few months was the Rev. Paul Hook, who has been succeeded by the Rev. Joseph Exton.

Most if not all of these were also domestic chaplains to the Jones (now Herbert) family.

First Book.

REGISTERS OF ST. JOSEPH'S CHAPEL, TRENCHARD LANE (now STREET), BRISTOL, 1777–1808

Book I

UNLIKE the country missions, supported by the local gentry, that at Bristol must be attributed to the requirements of resident and floating populations, attracted by the position of the great western port for South Wales, Ireland, and America, from not only the United Kingdom but the Continent.

The first book is of paper, 7⅝ in. by 6⅝ in., bound in skin, exclusive of the flyleaf at each end, and consists of 162 pages of births and baptisms written from the beginning, and 18 pages of marriages and deaths written from the end. It has been ruled for dates and money columns, which have been partially used for tabulating entries. The Society is indebted to Father Francis Grene, S.J., for facilities in transcribing the registers, which has been done by Mrs. Seymour Spencer and myself.

I am indebted to our Recorder, Mr. Joseph Gillow, for the following notes of the resuscitation of Catholicity in Bristol since the penal days, and of the priests who served the mission. When further books of the Registers are printed, they will be supplemented by further information.

Dr. Oliver (Collections for the Western Counties, p. 108) tells us that "from the so-called Reformation until the accession of George II, in no commercial city of the British Empire was Catholic faith and practice more discouraged and depressed than in Bristol. Mons. Jorevin assures us, that towards the end of Charles II's reign, "no one can hear Mass at Bristol, though it is a port frequented by many Catholics —Flemish, and French, and Spaniards, and Portuguese." Sir John Bramston in his Autobiography (Camden Soc. 1845) mentions the arrest of a priest whilst saying Mass in a house in Bristol on Sunday, April 25, 1686, who was brought to the King's bar on the following May 10, and remanded to the King's Bench prison. Notwithstanding the former assertions, it is probable that the Catholics in Bristol were attended by priests from neighbouring missions, and occasionally had the opportunity of attending Mass in the city during a great part of the penal times. In or about 1724, Father Joseph Marshall, S.J., was residing with Mr. Fermor in Earl Street, Jobbing's Lays. He left in or before 1727. Father John Baptist Beaumont, O.S.F., was titular guardian of Bristol from 1734–7, and probably resided near the city and attended to its spiritual wants. About the same time, or a little earlier, Father John Baptist Lalart alias Peters, S.J., was here for a time, and the next Jesuit on record is Father John Busby alias Brown, who settled in Bristol some years before his death, which Foley (Records S.J.) thought might have occurred there, though Dr. Oliver distinctly says that he died at Boulogne, July 20, 1743. He was succeeded by Father John Scudamore, S.J., of the ancient family of Pembridge Castle, who had a little chapel in the upper part of a house at Hook's Mills, near the Orphan Asylum on Ashley Down. Father Ignatius Grant (Lecture on 1790) says that he came in 1738, but this is obviously a rather hasty conclusion drawn from Dr. Oliver's statement that Father Scudamore was here about forty years. In 1743 he removed to St. James' Back, where he opened a chapel, which he continued to serve till his death, April 8, 1778, aged 82. He was buried opposite to the porch of St. James' Church. Previous to his death he was given a socius in the person of Father John Baptist Fontaine, S.J., in 1777, and it was he who commenced the registers. He left after the Gordon Riots of 1780, and was replaced by Father Thomas Brewer, S.J., who remained till his death, April 18, 1787, aged 44. His elder brother, Father John Brewer, S.J., of Shepton Mallet, occasionally supplied for him. During Father Brewer's time the want of better accommodation was seriously felt by the congregation, and he commenced to raise subscriptions towards a new house and chapel, and had accumulated considerable funds when death prevented him from carrying out his purpose. His successor was Father Robert Plowden, S.J., who is said to have taken possession of the mission in October, 1787. He provided a convenient and roomy house, and opened St. Joseph's Chapel in Trenchard Street on June 27, 1790. He also purchased property at the west end of the chapel on which to erect poor-schools, at an expense of over £1,000. In celebration of the centenary of the opening of this chapel, Father Grant gave a very interesting "Lecture on 1790," in which he traced the history of the mission, and gave a list of one hundred and thirty-three priests who had ministered to the Bristol Catholics down to 1890. The dates of the first three priests, however, cannot be accepted as accurate, and vary somewhat from the above account. With this "Lecture" was published a very excellent portrait of Father Plowden. During this worthy ex-Jesuit's time, for the Society had been suppressed in 1773, he was often assisted by Père Jean Marc Romain Moutier, a French emigré who had settled in Bristol as a teacher of the French language in 1797, and remained till his appointment as chaplain to the Chichester family at Calverleigh in August, 1823. Another occasional assistant in 1810 was Père Amator Valentin Le Villain, who likewise taught French in Bristol. From July 1811 to November 1812, Father Plowden had an assistant in the person of the ex-Jesuit, Father John Reeve alias Power, who did not rejoin the Society; and from November 1812 till Father Plowden's departure from Bristol in 1815, Father Joseph Tate, S.J., was his socius, and then assumed charge of the mission until 1822.

Nota benè.

Quòd in omnibus baptismis à me infra scripto hactenùs collatis, et qui in hoc registro meâ manu describi incipiunt dié 4ª Julii, 1802. Patrini manum infanti supponere et eundem tangere nunquàm admoniti sint; cumquè ejusmodi attactus, secundùm omnes Theologos ad impedimentum cognationis spiritualis contrahendum requiratur, et eudes præcipuè, injussi nihil ejusmodi præstare soleant, impedimentum hoc intèr dictos Patrinos, et levatas infantes et earum matres subsistere præsumi non potest. Quòd si qui inter baptizandum infantem se tetigisse meminerint, aut eamdem in defectu Matrinæ tenuerint, (quod ex registro resciri potest) hi impedimentum contraxerunt. Ad quarum rerum cognitionem hanc manu meâ declarationem subscripsi hâc die 12ª Februarii, 1805. J. Moutier Misª Apocª.

* The conjunction of the names of du Moulin, Moore (? of Fawley, baronets), and Anastasia suggests connections with the family of Browne, Viscounts Montagu.

I am indebted to Monsignor Carter for stating that the wife of the last Viscount Montagu married Dr. Slaughter, not Haughten. (Registers of Cowdray; Cath. Rec. Soc. i, 224.) Father Raymund Palmer certainly wrote Haughten, evidently mistaking the name, which is not very different in certain caligraphy.

[At the end an Index has been inserted, occupying the 3rd to 11th of 12 pages, which are counted as the first 12 from the reverse end. On the first is written] of the names of those whose baptisms are recorded in this register, beginning with June 1794 & ending with August 1808.

The number baptized during the period amounts to 1,008.

The figures in the Index refer to the pages of the register, which are numbered alternately at the foot & in the corner of the page.

29 Nov. 1832.

[The Index is not reproduced here, as this volume must have its independent Index.]

[On the 12th or last Index page are the following rough pencil notes, which are often almost illegible.]

* Some names occur at the edge of frayed paper.

* Sister of Charles, 15th Earl of Shrewsbury. She married Francis Fortescue Turvile, Esq., of Husband's Bosworth, Leicestershire.

† This giant, Patrick Cotter, must not be confused with the taller one, Charles Byrne, who died in 1783, and whose skeleton may be seen in the Royal College of Surgeons. Both assumed the show-name of O'Brien. Cotter's remains were stated to have been raised by the infamous Resurrectionists of those days; but they doubtless repose still in the grave mentioned in these registers. Such minute description of his living height would seem conclusive.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER OF SIR ROBERT CROSSE TO SIR ROBERT CECIL OF FEB. 11, 160⅘, IN THE "CECIL PAPERS" AT HATFIELD

Some time back an enquiry was made as to the personality of the wife of Sir Robert Crosse, who changed maritime for marital buccaneering, "thinking to have lived in Pease with my selfe & the world."

The question of her name and sufferings must interest us, and I requested and obtained permission to print it. J. S. H.

"Seeing there would be no ymployment for me after the decese of our latte Soffren Quine Elizabeth, I thought it my beste course to betake me to a wyffe wch then I did thinking to have lived in Pease with my selfe & the world, but now I heir say, that the pore Fortune I had wythe her, the 2 partes tharof wylbe taking from me because she is a recusant, I have done my indevore to alter her from it, & have found that grasse with the lord of *Crutelbury to cum to my house & Sir Cris toffer † Perkes twice, with Sir Edwd Hobbie, & sithes Crismasse a devyne of the lo: Crutleberries, but all this, neither I can yt alter her inward thoughts in that poynte."
